PRODUCERS YIELD TO CHIEF DEMANDS OF ACTORS' GUILD

Threatened Walkout of Screen Performers Is Believed Averted by a Last-Minute Agreement of Major Companies.

EXPECTED SUPPORT IS LOST BY CRAFTS

Stars' Union Recognized as the Sole Bargaining Agency; Conferences Planned on Other Points

HOLLYWOOD, May 9.—(AP)—The Screen Actors' Guild by a practically unanimous rising vote tonight, accepted the program of the board of directors to obtain guild shop recognition.

HOLLYWOOD, May 9.—(AP)—Settlement of the threatened Screen Actors' Guild strike was indicated tonight when Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the film producers' conference committee, announced the majority of producers had agreed to recognize the guild's chief demands.

His statement was issued just before the guild met to take final action on a proposed walkout and was to be read at the meeting.

"Speaking for my own studio and the executive heads of all the other studios whom I have been able to reach," Schenck said, "I am pleased to be able to say that all important questions discussed by committees representing the motion picture producers and the film actors have been settled satisfactorily to both sides.

Producers Agreeing.

"Including Columbia Pictures, R-K-O, Paramount, M-G-M, Universal and 20th Century-Fox, the producers have agreed to deal with the actors under guild shop, the specific divisions to be worked out.

"Working conditions for actors have been amicably adjusted.

"It has been the common endeavor of both committees to work out the best possible conditions for players receiving smaller salaries, and it is my opinion that the points agreed upon by the two committees will be regarded by all parties concerned as equitable and just.

"In the relatively short time the producers' committee has had to work out the committee's own recommendations and submit them to the producers as a whole, it has been impossible to reach the heads of every studio. However, there should be no delay in obtaining an answer from those not yet conferred with. I believe the result of our conferences will represent a permanent basis for mutual good will and helpfulness between producers and actors."

Chief Demand.

Recognition as the sole bargaining agency for screen players was the chief demand of the guild. Schenck said the studios he had contacted agreed to this.

This action by producers apparently left the Federated Motion

Wreckage of Airliner In Jungle Is Located

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 9.—(UP)—An airliner which crashed April 23 with nine persons, including two Americans, aboard, was sighted today by Henry S. Villard, second secretary of the American legation here.

He sighted the wreckage while flying from Caracas to Tumeremo and dropped food and medicine to the survivors.

The plane crashed while en route from the Brazilian frontier. Among its passengers were Frederic D. Grab, commercial attache of the American legation, and William Armstrong Perry, correspondent for the New York Times. Perry's condition was said to be critical.

Villard said he sighted three men near the wreckage.

Merrill, Co-Pilot Over Sea On Round-Trip London Hop

Weather Is Good and Tail-wind All the Way Is Likely.

NEWARK, N. J., May 9.—(AP) Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, flying non-stop to London, radioed to Eastern Air Lines at 10:15 p. m. (Atlanta time) they were "just leaving land."

Twenty miles south of St. John's, Newfoundland, they had flown 1,155 miles from Floyd Bennett field, Brooklyn. The airline said the fliers did not refer to the shower which they messaged they were passing through an hour before.

DICK MERRILL.

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie took off from Floyd Bennett field, Brooklyn, at 3:36 p. m., (Atlanta time) today in their monoplane "Daily Express" on a nonstop flight to London.

They planned to land there in about 19 hours, flying at 140 miles an hour. They carried pictures of the Hindenburg disaster and were to bring back coronation news and fashion photographs.

"So long, I'll see you Thursday night," shouted Merrill, ace commercial pilot and trans-Atlantic flyer, to friends as they left.

Lambie, his regular copilot on a transport run from New York to Florida, was to serve in the same capacity on the trip over and back.

Airport Manager Ken Behr called the takeoff "one of the cleanest I've ever seen."

The ship was loaded with about 1,200 gallons of gas.

The plane, bought from Harold Vanderbilt, carried twin 450-horsepower engines, an "automatic pilot," a gyro-compass, and two-way radio by which the fliers planned to keep in communication with the Eastern Air Lines office in Newark, N. J.

William C. Zint, official timer of the National Aeronautical Association, recorded the takeoff time at 3:36.14 p. m. (Atlanta time). Weather conditions were reported favorable, with a constant tail wind of 25 miles an hour in prospect. Rain squalls off Ireland were expected to pass before Merrill and Lambie reach there.

If completed, the flight will be the 34th trans-Atlantic airplane nonstop crossing, and the second

Brazil Military Revolt Is Predicted for Today

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, May 9.—(UP)—The newspaper, El Diario, said today that a revolution was due to start in two Brazilian states—Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo—at dawn Monday.

Twenty-five thousand state troops under General Flores da Cunha, president of Rio Grande do Sul, were ready to oppose 17,000 or more federal troops in the state, the newspaper said.

Besides Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo, the politically powerful state of Bahia also was reported involved in a movement against the federal government of President Getulio Vargas.

SEVEN ARE KILLED IN BUS COLLISION

Truck and School Vehicle Sideswipe; Another Reported To Be Near Death

CHATTAHOOCHEE, Fla., May 9.—(AP)—Seven high school boys from Greensboro, Fla., were killed in a collision of their school bus and a motor truck near here last midnight.

All members of the Greensboro Club of Future Farmers of America, the boys were returning from a convention trip to Marianna when the bus and the flatbottomed body of the truck sideswiped.

The dead were Francis Sheppard, 16; Edwin Walker, 17; Harry Van Landingham, 14; Hugh Eubanks, 17; Mack Sheppard, Russell Rowan, 15, and his cousin, Bernard Rowan, 15.

Members of the party said about 35 boys were in the bus, which was being driven by Thomas Smith. Seats were placed lengthwise along both sides of the bus and through the center.

The left side of the bus was torn out, but the driver was not injured.

"It was terrible," said Sam Smith, a passenger, who received a slight head injury.

"I was sitting in the back of the bus on the side where the truck hit. I didn't see it coming and didn't know anything about it until it hit us. We were on our side of the road.

"I don't know much about what happened. Some of the boys were screaming about their brothers being killed."

Sam Smith is brother of the bus driver.

Congress Considers Memorial To Memory of Jefferson Davis

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—Congress is contemplating authorization of a memorial to Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America—the marker to be erected in the capital of the union he once opposed.

Plans for the memorial already are being drafted by several interested governmental agencies. A bill to permit the Daughters of the Confederacy to erect a "suitable marker" at the terminus of the Jefferson Davis national highway has passed the house and awaits senate action.

A statue of Davis, as a representative of Mississippi, his native state, stands in "Statuary Hall," in the capitol, but no formal memorial has been erected in Washington for the man who served in the United States cabinet, the senate and the army.

Under provisions of the bill introduced by Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, the memorial marker is to be erected in a site to be selected by the director of the National Park Service, with approval of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

The bill specifies the site shall not be on the grounds of the capitol, White House or Library of Congress.

The final design is subject to approval by the National Commission of Fine Arts. Commission officials said today that no design had yet been submitted.

After his graduation from West

GOVERNORS OPEN RAIL RATE PARLEY AT SESSION TODAY

Alabama Chief Executive Will Preside as Campaign Is Launched; Cotton Men Attend Preliminary Conference.

'FUTURE MARKETS DEPEND ON RATES'

'Traffic Density Cannot Be Developed Unless Present Tariffs Are Reduced,' Says Rivers.

Determined to seek "parity" freight rates to encourage southern industry, governors and state authorities of the southeast will meet here today.

Governor Rivers will be host to the visitors. Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, will preside at the conference, scheduled for 10 o'clock this morning at the Henry Grady hotel.

Governor Graves, who is chairman of the conference, arrived here yesterday from Montgomery. Governor Gordon Browning, of Tennessee, left Nashville last night for Atlanta.

A preliminary meeting was held last night at a downtown hotel, attended by executives of major southern cotton mills.

Rivers Present.

Besides Graves, those attending the meeting included Governor Rivers, and Governor Hugh White, of Mississippi; Norman Elsas, vice president of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mill; E. L. Hart, traffic manager of the Atlanta freight bureau; John M. Cooper, Atlanta businessman; E. W. Swift, of Columbus, Ga.; Louis Jones, of Canton, Ga.; J. A. Mandeville, of Carrollton, Ga.; E. M. Kilgore, traffic manager of the Georgia Cotton Company; H. C. Casteel and L. J. Folse, of Mississippi.

It was indicated last night the conference will have four major objectives: (1) to discuss employment of counsel for the fight; (2) to plan the method of attack (national legislation or through the Interstate Commerce Commission); (3) to frame a concrete objective, and (4) to form a permanent organization to carry on the attack.

Many To Attend.

Besides the governors, the conference will be attended by industrialists, rail officials, traffic experts and representatives of utility and railroad commissions in the various states.

Governor Graves said at Montgomery Saturday night that the conference contemplates an attack on "present unfair differentials against the south," and that the at-

PROMPT PAYMENT OF POLL TAX URGED

Fulton Registrars Ask All Voters to Avoid Rush at Last Minute.

The Fulton county board of registrars made an appeal yesterday to voters who have not paid their 1936 poll tax.

"We will give you certificates to qualify you to vote even if you don't pay your 1936 poll tax until June 8, the day of the election," they said in effect, "but please don't put us to that extra work."

The official list of qualified voters will be certified to the election officials several days before the balloting, it was pointed out. After this is once done, the list cannot be changed.

As it has been announced citizens will be allowed to pay their poll tax even on the day of the June 8 election, the registrars declared that special certificates must be issued each citizen who qualifies after the official list is certified, thus creating additional work.

Please, they earnestly requested, pay that past due poll tax at least a week prior to the election for there might be some slip that will prevent the voter from casting his ballot if he waits until the last minute to qualify.

Under the recent ruling of the attorney general, citizens who were registered to vote in the last general election or registered prior to December 8, 1936, and who have paid their 1936, and prior, poll tax will be qualified to cast ballots in the special election for repeal, social security and the 26 amendments. No new registration is required, only payment of the 1936 poll tax.

Artist Pictures Most Solemn Moment of Coronation

London Daily Sketch from Wide World.

A sketch by Fortunino Matania, R. I., of King George VI as the Archbishop of Canterbury places the crown of St. Edward, the supreme emblem of the British monarchy, on the head of the King. The archbishop intones: "O God, the crown of the faithful bless, we beseech Thee, and sanctify this Thy servant George our King, and as Thou dost this day set a crown of pure gold upon his head, so enrich his royal heart with Thine abundant grace, and crown him with all princely virtues, through the King Eternal, Jesus Christ Our Lord." Then as the lights of Westminster Abbey are turned on to the full, the peers put on their coronets, the kings of arms their crowns, and all those present shout loudly and repeatedly: "God save the King."

1,000,000 Persons Brave Rain To Witness Coronation Rehearsal Sans Gay Costumes

Thousands Up All Night to Catch Glimpse of Tarnished Coach.

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—Undaunted by a cold, drizzling rain, throngs estimated at nearly 1,000,000 persons fought and jammed their way into the streets between Buckingham palace and Westminster Abbey early this morning to watch the final rehearsal of the coronation procession.

It was the show for the masses, the chance for those who can not witness Wednesday's brilliant spectacle to get an idea of what the progress of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to their coronation will be like.

Cheer Empty Coach.

The outpouring was the largest crowd in London since the funeral of King George V 16 months ago, a vast assortment of shivering, bedraggled but happy human beings who cheered wildly at the sight of the empty gilded coach of state and the various mounted military contingents.

It provided an excellent preview of the throngs that will swarm through London on coronation day, three days off.

Thousands Stay Up.

Thousands stayed up all night to make sure of vantage points. With the bus strike still in progress thousands walked miles for the chance to see and to get soaked to the skin.

By 6 a. m., the streets along the route were black with men, women and children huddled under newspapers, blankets, wraps and umbrellas, but who joked, laughed and stamped their feet in efforts to relieve the monotony of the wait and the cold.

MUSSOLINI ROARS ITALY'S DEFIANCE

First Anniversary of African Conquest Celebrated in Roman Fete.

ROME, May 9.—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini roared to the world today from the balcony of Venice Palace that European peace depends upon "the warnings from the profound conscience of the Italian people."

Foreign diplomats among 500,000 cheering Italians jamming the palace square in celebration of the first anniversary of their African conquest believed that Il Duce's words were directed to Great Britain.

Mussolini said Italy wanted peace—"peace for us and for all."

African Defense.

He turned to a defense of Italy's "mission of civilization" in Africa.

Il Duce's speech followed his order to Italian newspaper correspondents to leave London and hurry home. All but three British newspapers were banned in Italy.

Diplomats believed Italo-British relations were more strained than at any time since Italy's Ethiopian conquest menaced British naval dominance in the Mediterranean and Red seas.

There were reports that the breaking off of press relations—blamed on British newspaper criticisms of Italy's military role in Spain and aspersions cast on the bravery of Italian soldiers—might

Wife of Rail President Given Medal As 'The American Mother of 1937'

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Surrounded by members of her "typical American family," Mrs. Harriette Flora Gray, of Omaha, Neb., was acclaimed by New York and the nation today as "the American mother of 1937."

The 67-year-old wife of Carl R. Gray, president of Union Pacific railroad, received the Golden Rule Foundation's gold medal at a luncheon in her honor. Her husband, two sons and daughters-in-law, and one of her five grandchildren proudly watched the ceremony.

Mrs. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the foundation's Mother's Day committee, introduced Mrs. Gray

"You are a representative American mother of the highest type, courageous, strong in faith, upright and fearless," said Mrs. Poling to the woman who 50 years ago married a young railroad telegraph clerk when the two had but $4 between them.

The medal Mrs. Gray received was two inches in diameter, with the figure of a mother holding a child on one side and on the reverse, a cherub blowing a trumpet and the name of her three sons, Carl R. Jr., of St. Paul, Minn.; Russell Davis Gray, of Wellesley, Mass., and Dr. Howard K. Gray, of Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn.

Mrs. Gray and her family went to a radio station for her talk to mothers of the nation. She was introduced by Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, who en-

MOUNTAIN RANGE IS SOLE BARRIER TO BASQUE CITY

Relentless Insurgents Push Outposts to New Line Less Than 12 Miles From Seaport Capital of Northern Province.

FRANCO'S FORCES GAIN NEAR MADRID

Six-Mile Advance on Toledo Front Results From Disruption of an Attack by Red Troops.

VITORIA, Spain, May 9.—(AP)—General Mola's besieging Insurgent army, closing relentlessly in on Bilbao, today had its outposts at several points less than 12 miles from the Basque capital.

Insurgent officers said their forces had only one more mountain range, that of Biscargi, to capture before marching into Bilbao itself.

But in Bilbao, Basque women joined their menfolk in digging new trenches to strengthen the "iron ring" on which the defenders of Bilbao are preparing to fight to the finish to hold their capital.

Counter-Attack Launched.

Meanwhile Basque fighting men launched a savage counter-attack against the Insurgent positions on Mount Sollube, northeast of the city, the scene of desperate fighting yesterday.

The non-combatant movement to the trenches was partly in response to a Communist party manifesto.

Under the guns of the French navy 3,000 more women, children and aged men from Bilbao were crossing the Bay of Biscay today to havens in France.

The French cruiser Emile Bertin kept the Insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera from halting the refugee convoy.

When the Insurgent cruiser steamed close to the three ships the 5,886-ton French cruiser bluntly told the Cervera's commander to withdraw.

At General Mola's headquarters here it was announced yesterday's drive had smashed through the Basques' ring of trenches and fortifications in the Mount Sollube sector, northeast of Bilbao. In that action the Basque losses were estimated at 400 dead and 1,600 wounded or captured.

Slopes Entrenched.

The Biscargi range, with crests lower than those of Mount Sollube, runs southwestward between Munguia and Guernica almost to Bilbao. Along its slopes run miles of trenches like those of the Insurgents captured on Mount Sollube.

Artillery and aircraft, diving frequently to rake the trenches with machine guns, practically blasted the Basques from their fortifications. In many cases Insurgent infantry was able to walk into strong mountain position virtually unopposed.

An Insurgent gain of nearly six miles on the Toledo front, southwest of Madrid, was reported in dispatches from that sector.

Tank Attack Turned.

A government attack led by a squadron of tanks was turned into a striking Insurgent success, said the dispatches. The tank advance was met by a shower of hand grenades and gasoline-fire bombs, which halted the tanks and blocked the way of the government infantry.

An Insurgent charge swept the

HULL PUT FORWARD AS LOGICAL PERSON FOR PEACE AWARD

Secretary's Leadership in Restoring Amicable Trade Relations Cited.

(Copyright, 1937, by United Press.)

WASHINGTON May 9.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull is being put forward by his friends as the logical candidate for the next Nobel peace award, it was learned today.

Those who understand Hull's foreign policy, particularly with respect to world trade, believe he has done more than any other individual in the world to re-establish and maintain world peace. They credit him not only with having introduced the "golden rule" as the yardstick of foreign policy but also with having conscientiously observed that rule.

Roosevelt Mentioned.

The name of President Roosevelt was energetically put forward at the recent Buenos Aires peace conference as the most likely recipient of the next Nobel peace award, and the Cuban government has formally suggested his name. Hull's friends say he would actively and honestly support his chief for the award, but they suggest that Hull is really the moving figure behind the United States' foreign policy of reciprocal treatment and he should be the person to receive the award.

They cite Hull's record in public service for a quarter of a century. It is one of never ending effort toward free-flowing international trade among all nations and equal treatment of all nations.

Opposes Secret Pacts.

He is bitterly opposed to secret agreements between governments, in which the peoples concerned have no say and little knowledge. He believes the surest way to bring about war is to throttle the trade and industry of any nation to a point where suffering and hardships are experienced. One of his epigrams is:

"If goods don't cross international frontiers, troops will cross."

Hull is a renowned authority on taxes and tariffs. His reciprocal trade program is based upon his knowledge of the latter.

Some months ago League of Nations committee cited Hull's reciprocal trade program as the most practical plan yet put forward for international economic recovery.

10 GEORGIA PAINTINGS TO BE IN U. S. EXHIBIT

Georgia will be represented by 10 paintings at the second National Exhibition of American Art which will open in New York June 16 and run through July 31, L. P. Skidmore, director of the High Museum of Art, announced yesterday.

Artists in Atlanta and vicinity must submit their entries to the High Museum by May 14 and from those submitted six will be selected and be sent to Savannah where the final selection of the 10 to represent the state will be made, Skidmore said.

$30 a Week To Kiss Show Girl 4 Times a Day

College Students Are Paid To Kiss Heloise Martin

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—A couple of New York college boys are currently being paid $30 a week to kiss Heloise Martin, Drake University's much-ballyhooed "shower girl," four times a day (five times on Saturday).

Some male members in the audiences at a Times Square theater, where the boys slave away at their four-a-day, claim they are overpaid.

Several of the hundreds of applicants for the job offered to work for nothing, but Patrick O'Shaughnessey, of New York University, and Tom Neal, of Columbia University, formerly of Northwestern University, got the call.

They sit in the audience at every performance, step forward when Miss Martin asks for a couple of college boys and then go through their paces, the theater manager explained.

Police and Parents Are Baffled In Disappearance of Ohio Co-ed

Heavy Rains Prevent Search of Vicinity by Boy Scouts and University Student Body; Friends Say Girl Was Happy, Doing Well in Studies.

DELAWARE, Ohio, May 9.—(AP)—The mystery of Ohio Wesleyan University's missing blonde co-ed, Ruth Baumgardner, 22, appeared no nearer solution tonight than when the pretty senior disappeared from her dormitory room last Tuesday night.

The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Baumgardner, of Lakewood, Ohio, spent Mother's Day with friends at near-by Worthington, waiting in vain for news of their daughter.

Chief Amrine, Deputy McKinnie and the girl's parents declined to offer any theory until some definite clue was uncovered upon which to base an assumption. Friends of the girl said she apparently was happy and doing well in her studies.

Heavy rain today prevented an extensive search in the vicinity of Delaware planned by Boy Scouts and members of the student body of 1,300.

At the request of Charles Copenhaver, of Cincinnati, president of the student body, Wesleyan's students launched a diligent hunt for clues yesterday, but without result.

None of the missing co-ed's fellow students or fellow members of the Delta Delta sorority had seen her since Tuesday evening. Her disappearance was reported Wednesday afternoon after she failed to attend classes and could not be located at her room, where she lived alone.

enemy back to his former rearguard positions at the village of Argera. Many prisoners and much war material were taken.

An Insurgent communique reported three children, a woman and two male peasants were killed in a government air bombardment of a village in the Granada region. Many others were wounded.

Travelers behind the lines in Insurgent-held territory said at Salamanca they were amazed at the speed with which reconstruction was proceeding under Generalissimo Franco's military administration. The Insurgent areas back of the battle lines rapidly were returning to apparently normal life, they said.

FRANCO PROTESTS BRITISH ACTIONS

SALAMANCA, Monday, May 10. (UP)—Rebel General Franco today protested to Great Britain that her aid in the evacuation of Bilbao was without historical precedent and therefore "unacceptable."

The protest, an answer to a British note that England would continue protecting refugee ships outside the three-mile limit of Bilbao, was expected to be followed by direct action to prevent the vessels from getting through.

GOVERNORS LAUNCH RATE PARLEY TODAY

tack will be taken to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The conference here is the outgrowth of a gathering in Washington April 27, called by Governor Rivers, and attended by governors of southeastern states and other officials.

Aimed at seeking a readjustment of freight rates as they affect the south, the matter is expected to be taken before the Intertsate Commerce Commission on "nationalistic theory."

Right To Competition.

Governor Graves declared at the Washington conference that "the people in every market of the United States should have a right to get goods on a competitive basis."

Governor Rivers declared that "the question of markets will automatically take care of itself with an equitable freight rate for the south."

However, action on bills now pending in congress which touch the question will not be pressed, the conference having gone on record to that effect in Washington.

ICC Test First.

The governors expressed a feeling that litigation should first be initiated before the ICC, and frowned upon political considerations being brought into the fight at this stage.

"The question of freight rates being governmental," said Governor Rivers at the Washington conference, "I think it is perfectly proper that leaders in the government, as well as in business, should take a lead in helping to bring about this much-desired end. Georgia will be 100 per cent back of the movement.

"We don't want an advantage over the rest of the country, but we do not want to continue at a disadvantage to the rest of the country.

"The only reason that anybody could possibly justify the discriminatory rates against the south is because its traffic density is less.

"We have tried all these years to increase our traffic density under the present handicap, without success. The only way to increase the traffic density is to attract and develop industry in the south, to produce traffic for the railroads.

"This cannot be done until the rates are adjusted."

Ambassadors Absent.

Because today's celebration was to commemorate Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, only Germany and Japan, who have recognized King Victor Emmanuel as king of Italy and emperor of Ethiopia, sent ambassadors.

Mussolini and the king reviewed 40 000 metropolitan and colonial troops and 10,000 native Ethiopian soldiers from Eritrea, Lybia and Somaliland.

More Men Observe Mother's Day Here

Are more men appreciative of mother than women?

Standing at a corner on Peachtree street yesterday, a Constitution reporter sought to settle that question. He also tried to determine whether the preponderence of lapel flowers would be for living mothers or for those who have left this earthly sphere.

In 15 minutes, on one side of Peachtree street, 131 persons passed, 68 men and 63 women.

Of the men, 27 wore white; 28 wore red, and 13 wore no flowers. Of the women, 14 wore white flowers, 18 wore red, and 30 wore none.

DRASTIC WARTIME TAX BILL DRAFTED FOR SENATE ACTION

Committee Shortly Will Fashion Levies From Series of Proposals.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The senate finance committee shortly will attempt to fashion a drastic corporate and individual wartime tax bill out of a series of anti-war-profit proposals.

Neutrality legislation intended to guarantee United States' isolation by prohibiting munitions shipments to belligerents and restricting trade in war materials now is on the statute books. Some senators expressed belief congress would follow that up by enacting principles of the Connally bill to finance a war from current taxes rather than borrowing.

Senator Connally, Texas, Democrat, said today the finance committee had decided to substitute his proposals for a bill approved by the senate military affairs committee giving the President authority to draft both industry and men in wartime.

The military affairs committee would levy a tax of 95 per cent of all income above the average for the three years preceding a war. It would also authorize presidential price - fixing, military draft of men between 21 and 31, registration and licensing of industry and penalties for violations of the emergency laws.

The Connally bill would lower personal income tax exemptions to $800 and $1,600, respectively, for single and married persons. The rate would be 10 per cent, with a surtax beginning with 6 per cent on the first $1,000 and reaching a maximum of 80 per cent.

Rates on corporate earnings have not been agreed upon.

Woman Borrows Life 85th Time Within 4 Years

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 9. (AP)—After borrowing life for the eighty-fifth time in four years, Mrs. Leo N. Vick spent Mother's Day quietly at her north Chattanooga home, still smiling despite a high fever and being confined to her bed for the first time since May, 1933.

The little, dark-haired woman has maintained her high spirits and good humor throughout her treatment for aplastic anemia—a rare blood disease—and says "I don't worry because it isn't good for me."

While many others have had aplastic anemia, none has survived as long as Mrs. Vick and none has had as many blood transfusions.

Vick spends most of his spare time seeking persons with blood that will match his wife's rare type.

Mrs. Vick, 40, had the transfusion on April 27. The incision in her left arm has not healed as quickly as the others, Vick said, adding that it is "hard to find a new place or an old incision that is ready again."

Aplastic anemia is described by physicians as a disease of the bone marrow which results in starvation of the red blood corpuscles.

The three Vick children, Margaret, 16; Billy, 12, and Maurice, 6, are the joy of the parents and all come in "to see mother for a moment" when they return from school and play.

Fewer Forest Fires Reported in Georgia

Forest fires on government lands in Georgia have shown an appreciable decrease over the past few months, in comparison to the same period of last year, due to recent rains and better public co-operation, it was announced yesterday by Joseph C. Kircher, regional forester here of the United States Forest Service.

"Public opinion is turning more strongly than ever before in favor of forest protection," said Kircher. "The increasing demand for forest products, such as pulpwood, saw timber, poles and piling is impressing the public with the fact our forests are valuable assets. The development of camp sites, picnic areas and our fish and game restocking program have made the people see our forests mean recreation and pleasure in addition to timber and watershed protection."

COTTON EXPORTS AND THE MIDWEST

The interest which farmers of the midwest should feel in the future of cotton exports of the south is forcefully shown in a speech by Lamar Fleming Jr. before the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Fleming points out the extent to which the high tariff policy on imports of goods from foreign countries has worked to reduce steadily the world market for American cotton. He illustrates his point by citing that Germany, formerly a large buyer of American cotton, can no longer come to this market because the high tariff against locomotives and other railway material which Germany produces prevents her from selling these manufactured products in America. Brazil, on the other hand, a large producer of cotton, is eager for German-made railroad material and imposes no tariff barriers; thus it is but logical Germany should buy her cotton from Brazil in return for the locomotives she ships to that Latin-American country.

Mr. Fleming points out that destruction of the cotton export trade must, in the long run, drive American cotton farmers into the production of other crops, such as wheat, corn, meat and dairy products. These are today the products chiefly raised in the midwest and it is from that section the cotton-growing south buys her main supply of these goods.

If the south cannot export her surplus cotton, and if southern farmers turn to these other products as main crops, it will leave the midwest with a large agricultural surplus for disposal. Then that section will discover the same tariff barriers the south has learned are, both directly and indirectly, working against the prosperity of its agricultural interests.

Thus, Mr. Fleming points out, it is to the interest of the midwest to join wtih the south in seeking the gradual lowering of those tariff barriers and the resumption of free commercial intercourse between the nations. The midwest should see the writing on the wall before bitter experience teaches the lesson.

PEACE IS POSSIBLE

There is a far-reaching significance to the conference held in Buenos Aires last year. Perhaps, one of the most important results was the universalization of the Monroe Doctrine. Heretofore the doctrine has been a unilateral one, with the United States alone promulgating and undertaking to enforce the doctrine. Today all of the 21 American nations accept joint responsibility for prevention of future colonization in the western hemisphere and prevention of the extension of autocratic government in this part of the world.

Speaking recently on the results and significance of the Buenos Aires conference before the council on foreign relations, Secretary Hull sums up three important accords concluded at the conference. They are:

First. The Convention to Co-ordinate, Extend and Assure the Fulfillment of the Existing Treaties Between the American States. In this agreement, the American governments reaffirm the obligations they had previously accepted in five international pacts and accord (among which are the Kellogg-Briand Pact, and the Treaty of Non-Agression and Conciliation signed in Rio de Janeiro in 1933). These comprise the obligation of the nations to settle, by pacific means, controversies of international character that may arise between them. The nations furthermore agree to consult and co-operate to make available effective means of pacific settlement.

Second. The Convention for the Maintenance, Preservation, and Re-establishment of Peace. This agreement is based on the conviction expressed in its text, "that every war or threat of war affects directly or indirectly all civilized peoples and endangers the great principles of liberty and justice which constitute the American ideal and the standard of American international policy.

Third. The Additional Protocol Relative to Non-intervention. This agreement reaffirms the convention signed at Montevideo in 1933 which embodies the fundamental principle that "no state has the right to intervene in the internal or external affairs of others" . . .

In addition to the three accords just described, the conference adopted a number of significant and far-reaching agreements and resolutions calculated to increase the flow of trade, to stimulate cultural interchange, and to improve the methods of communication.

For the success of the conference Secretary Hull is due a major part of the credit. He has displayed great statesmanship in lining up all American nations for peace.

He concluded his speech before the council with this significant statement: "I cannot believe that it is beyond the power of the statesmen of today to check and reverse the drift toward international anarchy, in the direction of which some parts of the world find themselves moving. The work of the recent conference proves, in my judgment, that no part of the world needs to reconcile itself fatalistically to the inevitability of war. Upon the same basic principles that were implemented at Buenos Aires, the entire world can—and, I hope with all my heart, will—build a structure of enduring peace."

LABOR SHORTAGE COMING

That the real problem which will face industry in the near future may be a shortage of skilled labor, rather than a lack of markets for its products, is indicated by a number of factors which, taken collectively, paint a picture of unusual manufacturing activity.

The demand for many goods in all areas of the country is near record levels while the necessary credit for the operation of the plants which must meet this demand is amply available.

In the housing industry alone, there is sufficient demand to keep construction and all its allied industries at the top pitch of activity for many years. The rate of new home construction in the country as a whole is not sufficient even to maintain present housing standards.

Railroads are demanding new, lightweight, streamlined passenger equipment in such amount that were the present shops to work day and night shifts for years, the orders would not be filled.

The shipbuilding industry will unquestionably be flooded with orders as soon as the new subsidy program gets under way.

Just as soon as the utility companies feel free from the danger of governmental interference, the expansion programs they contemplate will bring new activity to the companies which manufacture their supplies.

In the smaller goods manufacture, the rapid return to employment normalcy and the consequent increase in the general public spending power, is creating a demand that is reflected in plants running at full capacity with double or triple shifts of workers.

Instead of unemployment, before long industry will be setting up the cry for more skilled labor to meet an ever-widening demand.

CONSERVATION OF RESOURCES

The people of Georgia need to be made conservation-conscious. This generation, like its forbears, is needlessly wasteful. In a recent address on "Conservation in Georgia," Dr. W. B. Baker cites:

Special studies of the Piedmont section of the United States show extensive erosion. The states involved are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. From three-fourths to all the topsoil has been eroded from 30 per cent of the entire area of these five states. A total of 12,000,000 acres has thus been thrown out of use. In Georgia and Alabama 40 per cent of the land has lost three-fourths to all of its topsoil.

The extent of the loss is emphasized by the fact that it takes 400 years by natural processes to develop one inch of topsoil.

Dr. Baker points out that among effective methods for control are terracing, strip cropping, close-growing crops, crop rotation, planting trees, especially black locust, and seeding pastures to suitable grass.

Turning to an even more vital problem of conservation, Dr. Baker deals with human resources, stressing that—

The greatest resource of any state is its children. There are more children born per year on the farms in the south than in any part of the nation. The 1930 census shows an average for the United States of 545 children under five years of age per 1,000 mothers (rural). In six cities of American stock, Atlanta included, the number per 1,000 mothers was 225. Yet, the population of the cities showed an increase. It takes 370 children under five years of age per 1,000 mothers to keep the population stationary. The increase in the cities was due to migration from the farms and foreign lands. Forty per cent came from farms, 20 per cent from foreign lands.

In spite of the high birth rate in the south, less is spent per year per child for education, health and social improvement than in any other section. Georgia was third from the lowest in the Union in 1931-32 in per capita spent for education. Arkansas $17, Alabama and South Carolina $19, Georgia $20.

Until the new appropriation of 1937, Georgia spent 3 cents per capita for public health, yet only 13 states in the Union have a higher death rate. The Southern Medical Journal for March, 1937, reports a high maternal death rate for every 1,000 live births. Five hundred and five mothers died in 1934, 459 in 1935 at child birth. This is 7 2-10 per 1,000 live births.

It is time for Georgians to wake up. They must not continue to allow their rich resources—natural and human—to be depleted.

Science learns there is a clock in the human mind. And what's as irritating as waiting around at 5 for a woman who set herself for 6:15?

The Pershing example of fixing up an old brigadier's blues is not being widely copied. There is nothing in a story that the ambassador will show in his graduation knickerbockers.

"It is understood Britain will make a gesture in connection with the war debt." Not that old one of pulling the pockets inside out, we trust.

Editorial of the Day

THEY'LL DO IT

(From the St. Louis Dispatch.)

They have, in times past, called her "perfidious Albion." But in this affair of the coronation of George VI, the English have, we submit, been as candid as any people could well be. There has been nothing sly or secretive or surreptitious in their manner. They have frankly told the world that, like it or not, George will be crowned on May 12, and anyone wishing to be present will be cordially welcome. And when they say the more the merrier, our British cousins are indulging in no perfunctory patter. They are speaking right straight from the heart.

Such frankness ought to be rewarded. London ought to be packed to the eaves. Whether it will be or not is anyone's guess. Certain signs might, of course, be construed as unpropitious. When prospective coronationists cancel their sailing bookings by scores and even hundreds, as we read the other day, the outlook is none too reassuring. And when the scalpers, if that's what they are, begin slashing prices, as has just been reported, then, as related of old in the ballad of the immortal Casey, "a pallor wreathed the features of the patrons of the game."

But come what will, we can count on the old bulldog tenacity of song and legend. They'll carry on, over there. They'll muddle through. They'll crown George, preferably in our presence, but, if need be, in our absence. Our last shilling on that.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON.

SPEAR MAN WASHINGTON, May 9.—Senator Borah has his own private method of statesmanship. He generally knows about things before they happen and has an uncanny way of spearing them before they are apparent.

For instance, just a couple of days before President Roosevelt submitted his supreme court packing plan, Mr. Borah went to a microphone and told the country it would be a national calamity to destroy confidence in the courts. Such Borah coincidences have developed too often to warrant any suspicion that the Idahoan is clairvoyant. Rather, he has developed the reputation of being exceptionally well informed.

Consequently, when the Idaho oracle arose in the senate the other day with a very carefully prepared attack on Fascism, certain knowing senators in the front row began looking at each other ominously. Ostensibly, the attack was aimed at Mussolini, but nearly everyone knows Borah would not waste his strength trying to reach Mussolini with a spear 3,000 miles across the ocean.

He was obviously tossing at a few suspected downtown Mussolinis a few blocks away.

HINTS Rumors have been going around for some time that Mr. Roosevelt's most advanced thinkers have advanced their line of thought to an idea of controlling the production of industry. There is even supposed to be a bill somewhere extant on the inside, but no one has been found who claims to have seen it. The supposition is that it represents an alternate new NRA plan, such as the President has mentioned frequently. (He has never mentioned this particular extreme suggestion, and there is no evidence whatever that he is sympathetically considering it as one of his possible new NRA proposals.)

One of his cabinet members, however, is not only mentioning it, but advocating it.

The least that Senator Borah knows is that Agriculture Secretary Wallace has made three lectures at Chapel Hill, N. C., recently, laying down a completely thought-out argument for control of industry. It has escaped public attention because he failed to offer the formula for it. That is, he had no mechanical arrangement putting it into easily understandable form. But he had everything else.

In fact, he gave all indications of being an advance agent for a new movement.

THEORY What Wallace seemed to have in mind is this: The government now controls farm production in effect, if not in fact. At least it is establishing the machinery for such control. It is also establishing machinery for some similar measure of labor control through its new-found strength in the National Labor Relations Board. So what it now needs to complete its economic control over everything is to get control of industry. Mr. Wallace wants particularly to control its production and prices.

Now, Mr. Wallace protests specifically that this is not Fascism. He says he is thinking about some arrangement whereby industrialists (meaning, apparently, all corporations) could co-operate among themselves like the farmers do through their county committees.

That is, the farmers elect their representatives to the governing county committees and the corporations presumably would be permitted to do likewise. Mr. Wallace says flatly he would abolish corporate rights and, of course, the federal government would be the guiding and enforcing power over the whole business.

In other words, Mr. Wallace is careful to preserve the name of democracy, but not the substance. He would not call his new set-up Fascism. In fact, he has already officially titled it "Social Democracy."

But what difference this would make to the ordinary citizen is not apparent. All would live in a wholly federal-regulated state, where prices, production and wages would be largely controlled by elective councils under federal domination instead of a Duce or a Fuehrer.

Few authorities believe the President will go for the idea, even in modified form.

HINDENBURG Unpublished testimony before the house military affairs committee will disclose that the Hitler government sought to purchase the safe, non-explosive helium gas in the United States more than a year ago.

This was impossible, as congress, some years ago, threw protection around Uncle Sam's world supply of helium by prohibiting its export. Only last week did congress move to modify this restriction by allowing export for medicinal purposes. The gas is used in treatment of respiratory diseases.

The policy against export is considered wise for several reasons. The supply is limited and its sale abroad for commercial lighter-than-air purposes would naturally constitute a military advantage.

Note—The last helium sold to the Goodyear Company is said to have cost $75 per 1,000 cubic feet. The capacity of the Hindenburg bag was 7,000,000 cubic feet, which means it would have cost something more than half a million dollars to fill it. However, the Germans have had fairly good luck with hydrogen. No paid passenger lost his life in the German commercial dirigible service prior to this explosion.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

So many things are wrong today
In this old world of ours,
It makes you wish you had for once
Divinely given powers
To make creation over
As you would have it be.

And yet, my dear, the world is good,
Life is forever blest,
For One directs our destiny
In ways He knows are best,
Someday we'll see the pattern clear
In all its majesty.

The Business Of Life.

Just what is the business of life? How are we to conduct ourselves in the years we spend as terrestrial beings to get the most out of the good gifts and the opportunities all around us?

First of all, for ourselves.

Well, I believe we are to accept whatever life brings cheerfully and with the knowledge that the place in which we have been put by fate is the place for us. Live simply, not trying to "keep up with the Joneses," and finding enjoyment in those lovely things that are within our own purview. Don't be envious of others and remember, always, that contentment, peace and happiness are things we provide from our own spirit and things are are totally divorced from external circumstances.

Then, as to duty.

Day by day do, to the utmost of your ability, that job which is laid before you, interesting yourself only in doing your best and not wasting happiness and strength in fruitless desire for other occupation.

Healthy ambition to progress to more important work, yes. But let that ambition be evidenced in doing the job at hand better, so you will be better fitted for the future duties to come.

A Man and His Family.

Primary duty of every adult man is to leave behind him when he dies sons and daughters who will, in their turn, be assets to society and the world in which they move. To set worthy example for those children, to gently inculcate those basic precepts which experience has shown are the better rules for good living and good life.

To educate those children to the best of your capacity, not necessarily in college lore, but in the true science of living. To show them, as you have learned, that it is not the job you do, but how well you do it that really counts.

If a man can raise a family of fine children, youngsters such as any one can look upon with pride, and set their feet firmly in the road to service, to happiness and to gracious health, he can lay himself down to die with the knowledge he has lived the good life and achieved all that God can ask, even if he dies a pauper.

A pauper, that is, as men measure possessions. No man with eyes to look upon the fields and the forests when they are green, or to turn upward to the sky when it is blue, with ears to hear the singing of the birds and the whispering of the breeze, with soul to revel in beauty, is ever anything but rich.

Serve, But Don't Reform.

And as to your fellowmen.

Serve, to the fullest extent of your ability. But don't try to reform.

Don't seek to make rules and regulations for the conduct of others, don't try to mould other men into the circumscribed limitations of what you regard as right and proper. Leave all men free to pursue decency according to their own standards. Only God is omnipotent, only God can see what is right and best for each of us.

Help the unfortunate. The fellow that needs help should receive it from you without impertinent investigations as to why he needs it. The man who has wasted his substance on drink or gambling or other dissipation knows, when he is hungry and homeless, what a fool he has been, better than you can tell.

I don't think you can find, anywhere in the Bible or in any other book of sacred writing, instructions to investigate the hungry, the naked, the friendless or the poor.

I don't remember that the Good Samaritan sent a case worker to discover why the unfortunate at the roadside had fallen among thieves, or to find out if the thieves were the man's own weaknesses, or really criminals.

In short, look with sympathy, always, upon the unfortunate and help to the extent of your ability. Strive to point, by example, instead of preaching, the way to decency and content. Leave to God the way to bring ultimate removal of those things which appear to you to be evil. If it is best He will provide the cure, in His own time.

In fact, who are you, after all, to assume the prerogative of classifying what is good and what is bad?

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Friday, May 10, 1912:

"Mixing 'hallelujahs' and 'praise the Lords' with the protestations of a drunken man who had been brought in from the streets in order that he might be converted, the Epworth League workers from St. Paul's Methodist church last night participated in mission work on Marietta street."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Tuesday, May 10, 1887:

"The Atlanta Gun Club meets this afternoon on the old grounds in Peters park, at 4:30 o'clock, for practice."

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Personal Equation NEW YORK, May 10. I have been thinking of the personal equation between a member of a parole board in any of our states and the man who comes before the board in prison uniform as a candidate for clemency. The member of the board is a free man, himself, and I am assuming that he is a fairly decent human being with sufficient imagination to realize what his decisions mean to hundreds of supplicants.

The member has the power of God, almost, for thousands of years of the lives of the prisoners are at his disposal. At a nod of his head, a prisoner may walk out of prison and go back to his family if he has one and the happiness of several innocent people, including the man's children, is in his hands. If he turns down the application, the man goes back to his cell and the smells and routine prison to watch his step for another year or two when he may try again.

His family, if any, do not appear in person at the hearing but the member of the parole board, if he is a human being, must feel their presence nevertheless and visualize several soiled little kids off in some city or country slum who have two strikes on them at the start of life because their father has been away, as the euphemism has it.

When the hearings are over and the member gathers up his papers to leave, nobody questions his right to walk out through the iron gate. He is a power and the guards, who usually are political appointees, defer to him with a fawning courtesy never shown the prisoners. He may walk over to the warden's house to eat fried chicken cooked by a prisoner and served by another prisoner and he may carry off as souvenirs a few trinkets carved out of wood or peach-stones or woven from horse-hair by prisoners in their spare time.

Sales Talk For Parole I understand that in some states the prisoners are not allowed to make a sales talk before the board, but only appear and answer questions and that may be a good rule because a con-man, for example, is an expert in this line. He might put some extra body English on his appeal and melt a stone with eloquence. Yet, there the man stands, having served, let us say, five years already and the man on the board knows that the years are long and monotonous and that prisoners count time by the day, the hour, the minute and even by the second.

At night, or bending over their work in the day, they do problems on mental arithmetic.

Twenty-four times 365 is 8,760 hours, times 60 is 525,600 minutes, times 60 is 31,563,000 seconds in a year, minus so many days for good behavior—until the man's mind learns to reckon all things in terms of 24 times 60 times 60. The parole board can give him a break or turn him back for 365 times 60 times 60 and a humane man must feel a great pull in his heart and a temptation to take a chance contrary to his suspicions. Prisoners grovel to him in an unmanly way to catch his favor and it is one thing to consider convicts as a vague class of bad men behind prison walls which most people never have seen from the outside, but quite another to meet them, one by one, as human beings asking to be set free.

Members Of Board Of course not all members of parole boards are decent men. Some of them are politicians of the lowest type, ignorant, sordid and brutal who get half drunk before the hearings and snooze through the appeal because the business has been done beforehand through outside negotiations and the decisions are in the bag.

The prisoners' family has done business with a political leader and a thousand dollars or five or ten, or maybe as little as a couple of hundred dollars, if the family is just a no-account poor family, has been put into distribution. There is no point in wondering what goes on in the mind of that kind of parole board member but the conscientious members, of whom I hear there are a few scattered about the country, must have many a struggle in the line of their duty.

There is a prisoner in Florida named Henry Sitamore, a jewel thief, doing 40 years for robbery who broke jail briefly five years ago and has been kept in solitary in the death-house ever since.

At a distance you may say that he belongs in prison and that precautions should be taken lest he break jail again. But in Florida, other men have served less than five years for murder.

I wonder how many who say that prison serves them right could interview a man five years in the death-house and vote to keep him there 40 times 365 times 24 times 60 times 60.

Prolific Writer.

Antoine Francois Prevost d'Exiles was born in Artois, France. As Abbe Prevost, he wrote more than 150 books. At the end of one of the volumes, he gave space to what he called "History of the Chevalier des Grieux and Manon Lescaut," and apologized to his readers for doing so, suggesting that only a few of them would find it interesting. So many found this story of a remarkable love interesting that it became a classic. It is the only one of all his works remembered today!

Two famous composers (Massenet and Puccini) have used it as the subject of operas. Anatole France said that it was a story of which not a single line could be improved. No one can read it without asking, "What is true love?"

Reward of Merit.

On April 1, 1578, William Harvey was born in Kent, England, a future immortal. Yet the thing for which he is best known, he didn't do! For it was Michael Servetus, Spanish physician, who first discovered pulmonary circulation of the blood. Servetus was burned at the stake for writing the book in which he first described it!

Me and My Wife, Son John and His Wife; We Four and No More

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

In the matter of electing a President, paying taxes or making war, we function as one nation. But in many ways we are like strangers living in the same house, having little in common except their habitation.

"Our country," to most of us, means that portion of it we can reach in a day's journey. And he is a rare citizen who has the vision and the breadth of sympathy and understanding to realize that the whole of America is his native land, the lean with the fat.

Most of us are Pharisees, thanking God that our section is not like that other one.

This self-righteous provincialism is not surprising in stay-at-home illiterates, but is always astonishing and dismaying when revealed by writing men of national reputation. It is a form of prejudice that distorts the truth like a mental disease.

When a writer of that kind reports his travels in a region far from home, even his compliments are soured by his prejudices and made offensive.

Let us suppose a case. And since an illustration is harmless, as Mark Twain demonstrated, when the story is told on some one of whom it can't be true, let us suppose that the traveling writer is a hill-billy from the backwoods of Louisiana.

The story of his travels reads like this:

"When I crossed the line that divides north and south, I saw neither border guards nor customs office, but I had entered a country as strange and foreign as Russia.

"I had heard much concerning police brutality in this section, and within an hour I had unpleasant proof of it. When I parked in front of a fire plug, a cop raged at me like a wild man, and another chased and insulted me for driving against traffic on a one-way street.

"The restaurants and hotels evidently live on tourists from my section. They overcharge the transient with a grim unconcern that leaves no room for argument.

"And such food! Nowhere else except in the Balkans can one find such abominable cookery and such sorry victuals. It is impossible to obtain grits, cornbread, hog jowl, black-eyed peas or turnip greens. No wonder the people seem ill-natured.

"Yet I met some men with surprisingly good manners. They might have passed as gentlemen from my section, except for their strange speech. Some of the women, too, are quite beautiful. They seemed strangely out of place in such an environment."

That's enough to give you the idea. It indicates prejudice so petrified in the skull that it would show in an X-ray.

No wonder we fight. There is little hope of reason and justice between conflicting interests if we can't even love all of our own country.

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Effervescence in France.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—M. Leon Blum has called a halt in his program of social reforms. But he stipulated that it is only a pause. "The pause that refreshes"—Fascism, say his left-wing supporters, who are not at all satisfied with the prime minister's policy. They want him to go on and on and drive in the direction of a social democracy. Jouhaux, the leader of the four-million-strong labor syndicate, says that only by discipline and cohesion can the French social revolution be carried through in a bloodless manner and the proof delivered that democracy is more dynamic than an authoritarian dictatorship.

The remarkable thing about the present situation in France is that nobody seems to think that things will long remain as they are at present. The right waves the specter of anarchy and chaos in the wind and in this way does its share to keep the country in a perpetual state of disquietude. On the other hand Socialists and Communists are holding conferences with a view to unite in a single revolutionary party and to take over power without the aid of the liberals.

There is no great likelihood of any upset or upheaval this summer. With the new system of paid vacations to all workers, Paris is bound to be half-empty during the summer months. But I dare to wager that the pot will be boiling and bubbling by next winter. M. Blum seemes to be somewhat weary himself just now with the job of dodging from left to right and steering a middle course. He has let it be known that he may resign. He is 66 years of age.

Liberals Divided.

If he does resign, who will be his successor? The combined Socialists and Communists seem to be getting ready for that eventuality. They want Jouhaux at the head of the government and the liberals eliminated. For the time being the liberals, or radical Socialists, as they are known over there, (leaders: Daladier, Cot, Kayser, Caillaux etc.), remain in the popular front, but they are restless and innerly divided. They, too, have a left wing and a right wing. The left wing to which Cot, present minister of aviation, and Daladier, present minister of war, both of them are known as young Turks, favor staying together with the Socialists and Communists. But the right wing is looking longingly in the direction of the right and Fascist leaders, such as La Rocque and Doriot.

The economic situation in France is not improving. As a matter of fact nobody knows how the treasury is going to meet its obligations after June. The enormous military expenditures drain the country white.

Unless M. Blum remains at the helm and keeps his strange bedfellows quietly under the covers, all might go well, although it will be a tour de force. But if Blum goes, the popular front will almost certainly collapse. At any rate in its present form. The possibility of an attempt being made to turn France into a Socialist-Soviet state seems not very distant.

Talmudic Tales

QUESTIONS I'VE BEEN ASKED.

What was the Balfour declaration?

The British government on November 2, 1917, through Arthur James Balfour, secretary of state for foreign affairs, issued the following, which has become famous as the Balfour declaration.

Foreign Office,
November 2, 1917.

Dear Lord Rothschild.

I have much pleasure in conveying to you on behalf of his majesty's government the following declaration of sympathy with Jewish Zionist aspiration, which has been submitted to and approved by the cabinet:

"His majesty's government view with favor the establishment of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done, which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

"I should be grateful if you would bring this declaration to the knowledge of the Zionist Federation. Yours sincerely,

(Signed)

ARTHUR JAMES BALFOUR.

In observance of this declaration, which was issued on November 2, 1917, and which has been reaffirmed by successive British governments, Balfour Day is observed, especially in Palestine, on November 2.

OFF THE RECORD--By Ed Reed

"Here's your car, Mister. We had to park in this spot too!"

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Thou'dst have, great Glamis, that which cries,
'Thus must thou do if thou have it!"

Is a federal law the only way to have done with the crime of lynching? Is it a way at all? If it is a way, and an only way, then no consideration of so-called "states' rights" should prevent its enactment. Those who truly love the principle of states' rights do not impeach it by invoking it when it won't work, by relying upon it in cases where states alone are incapable of satisfactory action and where a want of action will thwart the progress or limit the protection of the American people. They do not insist upon it, for example, in the matter of certain social controls which modern economics have made necessary and which cannot be exercised by states individually without crippling those states in economic competition with other states.

• • •

The control of lynching, of course, is not in this category. One state can act against lynchers without regard to what other states do. It is not an interstate matter in the sense of affecting the relations between states. The only excuse for federal action, therefore, is that state action is inadequate and that lynching can be wiped out in no other way. It is, to our way of thinking, an acceptable excuse—if the facts upon which it is predicated are correct.

• • •

But we do not think the facts correct. We do not believe federal law is the only way to stop lynching, and we do not even believe it is a way at all. Not the law proposed, at any rate. If mere law would do the thing, it might have been accomplished already. Lynching is murder, and murder is a crime in every state of the union. There is ample law to punish those responsible in lynching cases, and generally there is ample evidence, too. The failure to punish results from a failure of local public opinion to condemn, to insist upon application of the law. Until this local public opinion is changed, no law—federal or state—is going to be enforced.

• • •

Sympathize as we do with the intent and cause of those behind the proposed federal law, and suspicious as we have learned to be of many who cry "states' rights" today, when the only right they really want is their own to get away with something they should not, we are persuaded that the law proposed is childlike in its utter ineffectuality and that, this being the case, it is not an excuse for another encroachment upon the rights of the states.

• • •

As Luther Patrick, Alabama's homespun philosopher - congressman, is pointing out, the provision of a penitentiary sentence for any sheriff who allows a prisoner to be taken from him and lynched is impractical, especially in that "any sheriff who considers his own welfare might make it a point not to capture a fugitive threatened with lynching, fearing being overpowered and the prisoner taken." So is the provision for a $10,000 penalty upon the county in which the lynching occurs, since more often than not the lynchers come from some other county. Application of such provisions as these would be unfair as they would be difficult.

• • •

Federal law is not the only way, and not a way at all. The way is in state law, in the development of officials and a public opinion that will get existing state laws enforced and provide new laws where existing ones are lacking. There is no doubt of the fact that southern public opinion against lynching has grown mightily in recent years and that it is responsible for the better record of the south. In that opinion is the real and only solution. Develop it only a little more and it will command the respect of sheriffs, or governors, and of the blood-lusting, self-anointed morons who lynch.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

If I were disposed to look for and pay attention to discouraging symptoms, rather than looking for and appropriating and enjoying hopeful symptoms of life, I should be much alarmed at the constant evidence of touchy attitude of so many people—people who might be doing great good in word and deed, who are willing to stand around and whine and growl about something somebody did or did not do to them.

A man called me up the other day for an engagement. I was glad to accede to his request, thinking, of course, that the man had something worthwhile to talk about. He came and took 10 minutes of his time and 10 minutes of my time to start into a bitter string of stuff about his pastor—how his pastor had slighted him, and so on. I wiggled and waited, hoping he would break out laughing at his own ridiculous attitude, or maybe break out crying at the pathos of such peevishness and littleness and meanness, but he kept on and kept on, until I couldn't stand it any longer, and I asked him to please excuse me from further punishment—that unless he had something pleasant on his mind, to kindly release me from my promise to talk with him. He got mad with me, of course, but as he went away I offered up a prayer, the best I knew, that he might be saved from such folly ere the day come to its close.

Just then the mail came and I opened two letters of similar vein, and then a call or two on the phone of the same vinegary flavor. I was about to be swamped by that sort of stuff, when, thank the Lord, in walked a man smiling. I knew him—knew him well. I knew what he had passed through in the last five years. Yes, he was feeling fine; yes, he was happy in his work; yes, he was interested in this and that person who was sick and in trouble; yes, he had a good word about the weather—we need the rain as well as the sunshine; yes, life had meaning for him because in all the burden and privation which he had known, there were exceeding blessings to offset every seeming loss. He saved the day for me, and saved me from wondering if everybody had got up on the wrong side of the bed.

All day long I kept repeating a little poem that I love:

Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on!
'Twas not given for thee alone;
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years;
Let it dry another's tears—
Till in heaven the deed appears,
Pass it on!

SAILOR AND GIRL, 15, DROWN AFTER TIFF

Swift Current Off Sullivan's Island at Charleston Claims Couple.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 9.—(AP)—A petty quarrel between W. A. Narrows, chief storekeeper on the gunboat Charleston, and his 15-year-old girl companion cost both their lives as they drowned in the surf at Sullivan's island today.

The body of the girl, who was not identified immediately, was recovered soon after she sank. Coast guardsmen searched tonight with grappling hooks for the sailor's body.

Two companions on the beach said Narrows followed the girl into the surf after they had a sweethearts' spat. The girl splashed into deep water as Narrows neared and when he finally reached her in a swift current, they went down together.

CREDIT EXTENSION BY BANKS GROWS

Federal Reserve Board Cites Government Securities Holding Decrease.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—The Federal Reserve Board directed attention today to the growing volume of bank loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes.

The board's monthly bulletin said decreases since the first of the year in bank holdings of government securities "has been accompanied by an increase in all types of loans. . . . Most of the increase in bank loans has reflected extension of credit for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes, as indicated by a further growth in so-called 'other' loans and by increased holdings of open-market paper.

"During the past year so-called 'other' loans which may be considered as roughly indicative of the extension of bank credit for commercial industrial and agricultural purposes, have increased steadily, except for a decline in January of this year.

"From early February to April 21 their growth amounted to $360,000,000, about half of which was in New York city, and the other half spread over all the Federal Reserve districts."

BOTH SIDES DRAFT VOTE RULING PLEA

Decision Seen Tuesday; Losing Group Expected To Appeal to High Court.

DANIELSVILLE, Ga., May 9. (AP)—A quick trip to the state supreme court awaits the decision of 75-year-old Superior Judge Berry T. Moseley on whether the June 8 election on 26 constitutional amendments is valid.

Judge Moseley, considering the five and one-half hours of argument opposing counsel tossed at him here yesterday in the little courtroom of Madison county, said he will probably make his decision Tuesday or Wednesday.

Both sides were ready for a quick appeal should the jurist's decision go against them in the test of constitutionality of the election.

George Goode, former assistant attorney general, who brought the petition to halt the election on behalf of a group of Franklin county taxpayers, was prepared to ask supreme court action should his plea that the biennial November general election only is valid fail.

State's Attorney General M. J. Yeomans, should his demurrer to the petition lose, will probably ask the supreme court for a ruling. Yeomans said at the hearing yesterday he thought Judge Moseley's decision would be final, "since it would take 30 days to get the case before the supreme court."

Two other petitions similar to the one before Judge Moseley are set for hearings this week—one at Marietta on Wednesday, the other at Douglas on Saturday.

A STAR IS BORN

By WILLIAM A. WELLMAN—AND ROBERT CARSON

INSTALLMENT XVII.

"Well, it isn't exactly Libby's notion of how to get married on the front page, but it's home to us."

"I guess they know how to work it in there," Norman said. "Anyway, they look as if they need the business."

They went up the steps arm in arm and sought the chambers of the justice of the peace. He was a short, elderly man with a twangy voice. From his rooms could be seen the corridor with its cells. The courthouse was inordinately quiet and the voice of the justice rasped through the ceremony with grim business-like haste. He harn't changed his expression once from the time they entered his chambers.

Suddenly, however, there was a sound of wild applause. The occupants of a cell in the corridor, having had their mid-afternoon slumber disturbed by the voice of the justice, were witnessing the ceremony. When the climactic words "I pronounce you man and wife" were uttered, the men, a couple of mangy looking vagrants, could no longer contain themselves and they cheered the newly-married pair.

"Our public—even here," Norman laughed.

The justice looked up at these words and scrutinized that he must be mistaken about the thought that had just occurred to him.

But the enthusiastic demonstration of the vagrants had reminded him that he was not doing the honors very well. He smiled at Esther. "I must exercise my prerogative of office," he said, bending forward and kissing her on the cheek. "I hope you'll be very happy, Mrs. Henkel."

"Thank you," she looked around. "Where's the best man?"

Dannie, who had been strangely silent during the ceremony, stepped forward, too moved to speak. Esther gave him a hug.

"If you'll just sign the license," the justice said to Dannie. He was still watching Esther with a puzzled frown. "You know," he said, "I could swear I'd seen you some place before, Mrs. Henkel."

"Oh—oh, really?" she said, apprehensive lest their secret be guessed. "I think this is the first time I've ever been in your town."

"Your face seems familiar, too, Mr. Henkel. I wonder—" The justice broke off as Norman hurriedly handed him a bill. He gasped when he saw the size of it. But it only served to reawaken his suspicions.

Dannie handed Norman the license. "Here's your receipt," he said. "Now dodge the hungry pack."

The three of them beat a hasty retreat, while the justice, pocketing his unexpectedly large fee, was ransacking his mind for some clue to the mystery of their identity.

"I think you got by with it," Dannie exclaimed jubilantly as they hurried down the hallway toward the stairs.

"It was close, though," Norman said. "That J. P. was just beginning to remember where he'd seen us. Well, maybe that's the fellow who hasn't seen Vicki Lester in 'The Enchanted Hour'."

Esther laughed. "Anyway," she said triumphantly, "we did get away from Libby. I feel a bit sorry for him."

"Libby doesn't even know we left town," Norman said confidently. "His disappointment will be as spectacular as the wedding he planned for us."

They had reached the outer entrance of the courthouse and were still laughing at their almost miraculous escape. Suddenly they all stopped, eyes magnetically drawn to the foot of the stairs. Esther shrieked. Matt Libby, the picture of a general confronting a pair of traitors, was staring up at them.

He ambled toward them, disdain on his face. "If you will be kind enough to glance between my shoulder blades, Mr. and Mrs. Henkel," he said with elaborate scorn, "you will find there a knife buried to the hilt. On the handle are your initials."

"Please don't be angry with us," said Esther, trying to placate him. "We had to get away by ourselves."

"Oh, I'm not angry," Libby answered bitterly. "Just terribly, terribly sore."

Norman was pulling Esther away. If they stopped to argue this out with Libby, he knew, something would turn up and they'd be back in Hollywood reenacting the ceremony according to the publicity office's schedule.

"Lovely to have seen you," Norman said, hurrying Esther on. "Goodbye, Dannie, and thanks for the car."

They made a dash for Dannie's coupe and leaped into it.

"Wait!" Libby called frantically. "Hold him, Dannie!" Norman shouted as he fumbled with the ignition. "I'll remember you for this."

To Dannis, Norman's shouts were the signals called by the quarterback. In an instant he was on the alert and did a nice job of blocking Libby out of play. The car went racing down the quiet, tree-lined little street, Libby hurling imprecations after the run-away lovers.

"There go two rats I raised from mice!" he said sadly. "Thanks to you."

"They got a right to get married," Dannie protested.

"Sure, sure. But they got no right to doublecross the public." He was suddenly struck with one of his frequent ideas. "And they haven't done it yet!"

Like a flash he turned and bolted into the courthouse. Dannie, still on his job protecting the elopers, was after him as he tore up the stairway. But Dannie stopped when Libby entered the courtroom and charged down the aisle. He wasn't going to end up behind bars even for his friends. He stood fascinated in the doorway, not knowing what Libby could possibly do now to thwart the honeymoon plans of Esther and Norman.

The object of Libby's search was a telephone, and when he spied one at the bar of justice he made for it and grabbed it affectionately.

"Get me the Los Angeles Tribune," he called into the phone.

The justice of the peace was in the process of lecturing a burly negro who stood before him lackadaisically awaiting the conclusion of a speech he had heard many times before, even if not in so many words. The young man at the telephone was a disturbing intruder, and the justice was apoplectic when he lifted his stern gaze from the defendant.

"See here, young man," he shouted, shedding his dignity for the moment, "You're in contempt of court! I've got a good mind to put you under arrest."

"Just wait till I make this call, then I'm all yours," Libby flashed back. He got the desk of the Tribune and demanded a rewrite man in a hurry.

"Hold tight," he said into the telephone. "This is Matt Libby bringing you the flash of the year. Send it broadcast and don't spare the trimmings. Norman Maine and Vicki Lester were married at 11 a. m. this morning by Justice of the Peace—" He looked up at the justice. "Sorry, sir, your name's slipped me."

"Cornelius Mackay Witherspoon," the justice prompted. His courtroom had suddenly become an historic site. "I know I'd seen 'em before!" he added.

"Make that Justice of the Peace C. C. Whittlespoon," Libby continued to the re-write man. "You can say that after the ceremony they left hurriedly for an unknown destination, but it is to be hoped that the public will get a glimpse of the honeymooning couple as they go from place to place. Meanwhile if you get a line on their whereabouts give me a buzz. Sure, this is straight stuff, I have not the least idea where they went."

The justice was banging his gavel and announcing a recess. This last was superfluous, because there was a concerted rush for the door, and in a few minutes the courtroom was deserted. Everyone, including the justice, was hoping against hope for a sight of the fleeing pair.

Libby had fallen exhausted on to a bench. The negro approached him shyly. "Could you tell me what's going on, boss?" he asked. This was the first time he had ever been saved by a cyclone.

"Sure I can tell you," Libby said expansively. "Simon Legree—that's me—has called out the bloodhounds who are dashing in wild pursuit of a couple of double-dealing love-birds who have the colossal conceit to think they can cross me and get away with it. And that beach idea was such a swell new angle. Oh, well, another new star will be born tomorrow and maybe when Norman Maine sees her I'll have a chance to try it out after all."

The negro looked sadly at Libby. He had thanked fate for rescuing him from one speech and he had walked into another.

Libby left the courtroom thinking up novel tortures for Norman Maine. It was bad enough that he should be marrying such a sweet kid. But doing her out of the chance of a wedding on the beach!

Two hours later, still unpursued, "Where to?" Norman asked. "We they were chartering a plane.

"Where to?" Norman asked. "We may as well try Reno. They'll never think of looking for the married couple there."

It was early morning when the ship was circling the field preparatory to landing. A dispatcher on the tower of the administration building gave the pilot the clear signal and the plane swooped in. The plane rolled to a stop and the pilot emerged from his cockpit opened the door for his passengers.

"Is it all right?" Esther asked.

Norman searched the field. Nothing suspicious was in sight. "Yes, dear," he announced, relieved. There isn't a soul to bother us here."

STANLEY'S ADVENTURES IN AFRICA.

VI—Fight With Cannibals.

Henry Stanley's hair was black when he set out from Zanzibar to cross Africa. Two and a half years later, when he reached the mouth of the Congo river on the western coast of Africa, his hair was light gray, almost white. He was at that time only 37 years of age, but the worry and strain of his great journey had caused the change in his hair.

Lieutenant Stairs was wounded.

He had started from Zanzibar with three other white men and about 350 natives. Sickness, drowning and desertion had caused the loss of half the natives during the journey, and all three of his white companions had died.

This sad experience did not make Stanley stop exploring what was called "the Dark Continent." Thanks partly to his work, Africa is not so often called by that name today.

On a March day in the year 1887, Stanley began a trip which was to take him through Africa, from west to east. Now he was 46 years old. Seven hundred natives started with him, also five white men.

After reaching the headwaters of the Congo, the explorers found themselves in the midst of a cannibal country. Camp was pitched near the side of a stream, and 40 scouts were sent out to obtain food. They had not been gone long when there came the crack-crack of musket fire. Lieutenant W. G. Stairs and 50 men quickly seized their rifles and rushed toward the place where they believed a fight was taking place between the scouts and some savages.

Stairs and his men were right. A skirmish was in progress between the scouts on one side of the stream and cannibals on the other side.

The savages were firing arrows tipped with poison. Lieutenant Stairs was struck near the heart by one of the arrows, and four others on his side also were wounded. The musket bullets, however, at length caused the cannibals to run away, leaving four dead behind them.

The wounds from the poisoned arrows were treated by the camp doctor, but for days the victims lay moaning and groaning. One of them died. The arrow had not quite reached Stairs' heart, and after struggling through illness, he became well again.

NAVY INVESTIGATION OF ZEP IS DELAYED BY CAPITAL ORDERS

Will Await End of Commerce Board Inquiry, Which Opens Today.

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 9.—(UP)—The United States navy announced tonight it would postpone its inquiry into the Hindenburg disaster until the Commerce Department investigation — opening at 10 a. m. tomorrow—is completed.

The only reason given by Captain Gordon Haines, senior member of the naval board of inquiry, for the delay was that he had received orders from Washington.

Before the investigation is completed, Dr. Hugo Eckener, world's foremost authority on airships, will be in the United States. He is on board the Europa with members of an official commission named by the German government.

The death toll of the disaster stood at 35 tonight, and hospitals —in New Jersey and New York— contained many persons still in a critical condition.

The Zeppelin company said all bodies had been identified. The bodies of the European passengers will be returned on the S. S. Hamburg, sailing from New York Wednesday. It is planned to hold a funeral from the pier before the liner sails.

GRAF ZEPPELIN FLIGHTS SUSPENDED BY GOERING

BERLIN, May 9.—(UP)—Colonel General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German air minister, tonight suspended all flights of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin pending a report from the German commission en route to the United States to investigate the Hindenburg disaster.

The Graf Zeppelin arrived at Friedrichshafen yesterday from Rio de Janeiro. Passengers were unaware of the Hindenburg disaster at Lakehurst, N. J. until a few hours before their arrival in Germany.

Male of Species Rivals Female At Coronation

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—Britain's male of the species will be a bird of as brilliant plumage as the female next Wednesday when King George VI and Queen Elizabeth are crowned in Westminster Abbey.

Before the ceremonies of Wednesday are completed the King will have appeared in three colorful gold embroidered costumes and two glittering crowns.

On his way to the Abbey he will be robed in a crimson velvet mantle, bordered with gold and topped by an ermine cape. At his crowning he will be vested with St. Edward's crown and a gleaming super-tunic of cloth of gold. In the final coronation procession the King will wear a purple velvet mantle bordered with gold and trimmed with ermine, and on his head will gleam the diamond-studded imperial crown.

In the Abbey scene the gold-embroidered robes of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the gay uniforms and brilliant decorations of officials and the turbans of the Indian maharajahs, glittering with gold and precious gems, will vie in magnificence with the gowns and jewels of the women.

General John J. Pershing will be most resplendent of the Americans in his new uniform with blue coat finished in gold braid and epaulets.

The processions outside will rival the Abbey scene in color. The Life Guards will wear scarlet tunics, white breeches and silver helmets with white horsehair plumes. The Coldstream Guards will appear in their picturesque bearskin hats above colorful uniforms. There will be yeomen of the guard in medieval costumes faced with gold.

since he retired from political life.

He was chairman of the Republican national committee in 1907 and 1908. In 1916, he was elected to the senate. Harding, a colleague of his in the senate, appointed him postmaster general in 1923.

Early in New's administration, the postoffice department established transcontinental mail service and New was instrumental in its further development.

He passed officially from the political scene in 1929 when Walter F. Brown replaced him in the Coolidge cabinet, but he returned to national notice briefly two years later when he was summoned to appear before a senate committee investigating postal leases.

He clashed with Chairman Blaine, late senator from Wisconsin, and on one occasion said Blaine was "insulting."

On the stand New disclosed a deep-seated hostility between himself and John H. Bartlett, his first assistant when he served as postmaster general. He said he had "endured" Bartlett because of the latter's ability in business negotiations.

$600 Is Paid To Help George 'Put on Hat'

LONDON, May 9.—(UP)—Levy L. Coryell, who built up a "helluva big business" back in Nebraska with $100 capital, counted out six crisp hundred-dollar bills tonight as his contribution toward helping King George "get his hat on."

Coryell, who is the Horatio Alger of Lincoln, Neb., with a chain of filling stations in 400 cities and a smattering of grain elevators, banks, farms and apartment houses, didn't bat an eye-lash when they charged him $600 for a window along the coronation route.

"Well, it's a lot of money but we just didn't think his majesty could get his hat on without us so we came over," the Nebraska millionaire said.

SECOND ART GROUP SHOWN AT LIBRARY

Works of Living Americans Reveal Wide Range of Subjects.

Still life, landscapes, portraits and "picture stories" are included in the second group of paintings of living American art, now on view at the Carnegie library.

The exhibition brings to the library a variety of themes and representative work of the best American painters.

There are works of Georgia O'Keefe, Lucile Blanch, Isabel Bishop, Louis Eilshemius, Franklin Watkins, Niles Spencer, Charles Sheeler, Alexander Brock, Emil Ganso, Thomas Donnelly, John Marin and George A. Picken.

The portraits are Brook's "My Wife," a well-executed work, with splendid detail, and Miss Bishop's "The Kid," a compelling portrait of a young girl.

Action aplenty is in Blanch's "Outdoor Circus," a vivid painting showing an outdoor circus in full swing, with acrobatic acts, a tight-rope walker and a play on a small stage all going on at once.

Watkin's "Fire Eater" is another vivid work, brilliant in coloring.

The still life includes the study by Spencer, Sheeler's "American Interior," and the O'Keefe "Autumn Leaves," all of which are painted with skill.

As for the landscapes, Ganso's "Village Church" gives the onlooker a sense of pastoral peace. It is direct contrast to the "Valhalla Bridge" of Donnelly.

Other landscapes are Picken's "Hawthorne, New York;" Eilshemius's "West Point, New York," and Marin's "Deer Isle Islets, 1922."

1,000,000 WITNESS PARADE REHEARSAL

nightclubs still in evening dress stood shoulder to shoulder with weary scrubwomen, while an army of police strove to keep order.

People stood on the roofs of marooned taxis and automobiles, climbed trees and flagpoles and flooded into the decorated grandstands, to which they were admitted for three pence (6 cents) as against the big money Wednesday's spectators will have to pay.

Special trains from the provinces swelled the crowds.

A Drab Show.

Never has there been a larger crowd here for a more empty show. Instead of a full dress rehearsal down the Mall and Whitehall, with the soldiers wearing scarlet tunics, shining breastplates and nodding plumes—as they will Wednesday—the spectators saw khaki-clad soldiers and coachmen wearing raincoats and Indian troops under soggy turbans.

The gold state coach looked tarnished in the rain. The street decorations dripped and some colors ran. But the crowds cheered as though they were witnessing the dawn of a new world.

Cheer by Direction.

At some points they cheered by direction, in order to accustom the horses to the swelling roar through which they must move Wednesday.

Throughout the day the festive mood of the London masses defied the dreary weather.

The rain, however, did keep King George and Queen Elizabeth indoors at Windsor, where they were resting away from the crowds and festivity of London in preparation for their arduous activities of the coming week.

Coronations Are Costly.

The British government is spending more than $2,000,000 for the crowning of George VI.

A duke attending the ceremonies must pay up to $600 for his robes. A duchess pays twice that much.

A good grandstand seat for the procession costs as high as $250—though many may be had for less.

Accommodations for visitors vary from one dollar for a night's lodging to $5,000 for the week.

Some coronation day dinners will cost $25 per plate.

The beverage bill for coronation day is expected to total $10,000,000—three times as much as usual.

Visitors from Europe are expected to spend some $15,000,000 during their coronation visits.

It was estimated American visitors will spend an average of at least $400 each.

TAX DECLINE SET.

Epilepsy Control Possibility Hinted

PITTSBURGH, May 9.—(AP)—The "tantalizing thought" that a bit of chemical no larger than a mustard seed, if it could be rightly divided among the brains of all persons now living, might rid the human race of epilepsy was presented in a report to the American Psychiatric Association here tonight.

This dazzling preview of possibilities scientists are beginning to see for some day remaking sick minds, and of understanding the nature of mentality, was given in a paper, released in advance by the association, to be read tomorrow by William G. Lennox, M. D., of Harvard Medical School.

Epilepsy as a gateway to the labyrinth of puzzles of the human mind was suggested because there are in the United States today half a million epileptics. This, said Dr. Lennox, is about the same number as have diabetes or active tuberculosis.

People of Empire Flock to London To Share England's Greatest Hour

To Kathleen Norris Coronation Assemblage Brings to Mind Ghosts of Britain's Past and of the Man in a French Chateau.

The London scene, transformed by the coronation season, is described here in a dispatch by America's best-loved woman writer, who will write on the coronation ceremonies for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS.

(Copyright 1937, for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON, May 9.—(By Wireless)—Country children, when the circus comes to town, experience no greater delight than Londoners are enjoying in these pre-coronation days. This sophisticated, wise, weatherbeaten old city has given herself over to the spirit of holiday with a completeness and absorption that are essentially British. This is everybody's party and everybody is coming early with the full intention of staying late.

From all over the kingdom and from all over the world, people are streaming in to share in the greatest hour England has known in many a year. They find amusement everywhere.

There are street decorations to study. Hour after hour, the faces of the packed and slowly moving throngs are turned up to look at the banners of white, red and blue, the gold crowns and colored streamers, the festoons, rosetttes, and shields, the flags—flags—flags fluttering and curtseying everywhere in the soft May breezes.

Shop Windows Gone Mad.

There are shop windows gone mad with displays. On a long walk, I saw coronation frocks in some of these windows, frocks of exquisite brocades, smartly touched with the royal red and blue. There were priceless unset pearls arranged against a background of dark green velvet in the pattern of a crown. There were crowns, tiaras and coronets, themselves glowing with emeralds, diamonds and sapphires. In florist shops, masses of white lilies were crossed by bands of crimson coronations and the pure blue of delphiniums. Some of the more humble flower sellers were following the fashion with small pots in which blue lobelia, scarlet-tipped daisies and gold primroses were growing all together.

Nervousness naturally increases as the time draws short and as police precautions fence off certain streets entirely and the available sidewalk places grow scarce.

Hundreds of folk will sleep in offices along the line of march Tuesday night; hundreds of small children, clustered on pavements, will grow bewildered and weary before the dawn breaks that day and the first sounds of music and clinking saddle-chains come down the Mall.

There is to be but one entrance to Westminster Abbey and that one on the river side through a comparatively small door. Long, covered runways have been built to reach that entrance, and identification delays will be many and prolonged.

The Long Procession.

But they are all fun, these plans, fears and precautions. And great fun it is, and more than fun. For it's all part of a much greater procession than the one that will take place May 12; a procession that started far in the dim past when the oars of galleys dipped in the old Thames and the folk who crowded the shores to stare at them wore animal skins and carried blunt-nosed cudgels. A long stretch of history—a long story—and our civilization lies between those days and the other day when the new King and his wife and children went up the river in one of today's speed boats escorted by whistling and scurrying craft.

Ghosts—the old city is full of them and at such times as these they seem very near. Anne Boleyn and little Queen Jane had to wait for the tide to carry them to the tower, but the great Elizabeth's barges were helped by silken sails, "most curiously wrought." Their memories linger everywhere; the Stuart kings at St. James's; the kindly Queen Anne at Hampton court, where her cherry trees are today in bloom: the enormous family of George III taking the air of a Sunday morning along green alleys and the green park, with all London in admiring attendance.

Songs of Empire.

And to some of us, Dickens lives still when we stop at Lincoln's Inn Fields and wonder whether David and Traddles may not be stepping along presently for a cup of wine and a biscuit, "no great debauch wherever they may be had." Our hearts delightedly and reverently find scenes of a thousand beloved books and not the least of them Kipling's, who, like the faithful bard he was, went away from London with his king last year on a longer journey than even to the seven seas.

When the great bells ring together they seem still to be singing the song that Kipling taught them, "when London town is asleep in bed, you hear the bells ring overhead in "Excelsis Gloria," ringing for Victoria, ringing for their mighty mistress long years dead."

There'll be another ghost forevermore in London, a faintly frowning young ghost whose heritage was this goodly land; these cathedrals with their memories, and these twisted romance-filled streets, these traditions of matchless valor and achievement. Will he be listening beside some continental radio when the restless feet of horses, Irish pipes, Scottish bagpipes are stilled, when the plumed heads of Englishwomen are bowed and the heads of a million men bared, when trumpets, organ, bells and banners that lift in the May breeze take up the one great prayer, "God Save the King." To an uncrowned exiled king, what price England then?

COURT PLAN FOES MAP FILIBUSTER

Even Compromise Will Be Opposed 'All Summer,' Adamant Senators Warn.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—Opponents of the Roosevelt court bill served notice today that even a compromise of two new justices on the supreme court would be filibustered "all summer."

Although administration spokesmen held fast to their belief that there were sufficient votes to pass the measure without any compromise, Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, asserted:

"We have a majority of the senate against the plan for six new justices. If they try to get two, we will filibuster it all summer. But we have the votes against the six and wouldn't have to filibuster."

Wheeler conceded that some of those he counted as sure votes against the six judge plan would be willing to compromise on two. Several senators who have recently declared against the President's bill have offered compromises.

PARTY LINES FALL IN RELIEF DISPUTE

Return of Administration to States Is Demanded by Congress 'Coalition.'

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP)—Conservative Democrats and senate Republicans headed toward the same economy goal today with a demand that relief administration be returned to the states.

Republicans, who incorporated such a policy in their party platform last year, were expected to stand almost unanimously for state control of relief spending. Senator Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, said a big group of conservative Democrats were ready to join them.

The quasi "coalition," he said, would support the bill by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, to dismantle WPA as a federal project and appropriate $850,000,000 to be matched by state aid for relief work.

Under this bill the states would handle the entire administration of relief. Federal allocations would be made by the President.

Senate "middle-of-the-road" Democrats, likewise advocating economy, threw their support to the plan by Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, to increase state participation in the cost of relief but continue federal administration.

Byrnes proposed that states match federal funds on their relief projects, and observers generally believed his plan a likely compromise between the administration view and the Republican-Conservative Democrat plan.

Hopalong Cassidy Film Presented at Capitol

Hopalong Cassidy rides again in "Hills of Old Wyoming," latest in the interesting Cassidy series, which began a week's run yesterday at the Capitol theater.

An excellent stage show, "Red Hot and Beautiful" augments the feature film, which once again brings William Boyd to the screen as the hard-riding, fast-shooting cowboy hero.

The film unfolds a swift tale of Indians on a government reservation. A crooked government agent attempts to use his wards as a cloak for cattle-rustling. The ranchers rise in protest, headed by the intrepid Hopalong, and from that point forward the film moves apace.

There's plenty of colorful Indian background in this picture. It is one of the best in the Cassidy series, with plenty of thrills and action. Boyd enacts his role with his usual skill.

The stage show brings a cast of clever entertainers. There's variety, pretty girls, and lots of pep in the stage feature. Short subjects are shown on the surrounding bill. P. C. L.

WPA Guide Book Of Savannah Ready

Copies of "Savannah," first guide book of a Georgia city, produced by the federal writers' project of the Works Progress Administration, reached Atlanta yesterday.

The book is a volume of 220 pages, bound in cloth, with a reproduction of an early map of Savannah as a cover design. It is illustrated with 43 sketches and five maps of Savannah and the Georgia coast. The art work was done by project workers.

Its text deals with the history and development of Savannah and points of interest to tourists.

The Savannah Chamber of Commerce sponsored publication of the book. Fifteen workers of the federal writers' project in Savannah compiled, wrote and edited the guide under direction of Miss Mary Granger, district supervisor.

NOTED FLYER RAPS LINDY RACE PLANS

Codos Protests France Has Not Allowed Time for Preparations.

PARIS, May 9.—(UP)—Paul Codos, famous trans-Atlantic flier, tonight criticized the government's plans for the "Lindbergh anniversary" air race, from New York to Paris in August, because the three official French entries will not be ready for the flight by August 1—the earliest starting date.

The planes are not yet out of the hands of their builders, he pointed out.

The air ministry announced the first French plane will be piloted by Codos and his flying mate, Maurice Rossi.

ATTENTION OF U. S. WILL BE CALLED TO CHINA'S FEARS

Purported British-Japanese Partition Agreement Will Be Cited.

(Copyright, 1937, by United Press.)

SHANGHAI, Monday, May 10. Chinese correspondents in Nanking reported today that Foreign Minister Wang Chung-Hui has instructed Dr. C. T. Wang, ambassador-designate to the United States, to call the attention of the United States government to what appears to be "a new move for the partition of China."

The instruction followed a conversation Saturday between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the Nanking government, and Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of finance, who is in London as chief Chinese representative for the coronation of King George VI.

Dr. Kung telephone to report on developments in London which have been worrying the Chinese for weeks. They believe that a deal is in the making between Britain and Japan in which China will be the victim.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has denied any such intention but his denials have been so phrased that Chinese fears continue unabated.

Ambassador Wang sailed for San Francisco last week and should reach the United States capital about June 1.

He is expected to suggest that the United States, as a signatory of the Washington conference agreements guaranteeing China's integrity, should use its good offices to prevent any Anglo-Japanese move which would curtail China's independence.

Bottle-Fed 4-H Pigs Quadruple Their Weight

Fred H. Chalker, a 4-H Club member at Kennesaw, offers this picture to "teach other boys that pigs can be raised on a bottle." He reports that the pigs shown with him weighed only two pounds each when they were taken from their mother, and at first were fed with a spoon and after two days given the bottle. At four weeks, he reports, one pig weighed about eight pounds and the other ten pounds. At five weeks, they were trained to drink from a small trough.

Urban League.

By JESSE O. THOMAS.

As result of a resolution prepared and introduced in the state legislature of Pennsylvania by Homer S. Brown, negro member of the house, and passed by both houses and signed by the Governor, an investigating committee was appointed to ascertain why negro teachers were not employed in the public school system of Pittsburgh.

There are approximately 11,000 negro children in the public school system of Pittsburgh. About 12 per cent of the grade school population of Pittsburgh is composed of negroes. For a period of 26 years no member of the negro race was employed on the teaching force of Pittsburgh. The total number of teachers in the system is around 3,000.

Negroes have met the same qualifications as members of other racial groups. They have graduated from the local high school, the Teachers' College and the University of Pittsburgh.

The superintendent of education, as well as members of the board, is in a very embarrassing position as he is called upon to testify under oath as to the reason why qualified negro teachers have not been employed. A number of instances have been brought to the attention of the state investigating committee of where a negro student was the only member of his or her race in the class, and from the point of view of scholarship, ranked the highest in the class; and notwithstanding the fact that many negroes have been honor graduates during these years, and in consideration of the further fact that all of their classmates who made lower marks than did the negro members, have been employed.

To Open Door.

As result of this impartial, thorough and non-prejudicial investigation, the doors will be opened for qualified negro teachers in the future to find employment in the Pittsburgh school system. This new opportunity has come to the negro teachers of Pittsburgh as result of having a negro elected to the state legislature. Credit, of course, must also go to the fair-minded white members of both houses who were convinced by the facts presented that a grave injustice was being done to the negro population and who by majority vote passed this important piece of legislation.

Negroes in Flood.

In the early part of March the southern field director of the National Urban League was given an assignment to investigate the treatment negroes were receiving in the flood-stricken area of the states of Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana. This investigation covered some 2,400 miles and included the cities of Memphis, Tenn.; Marian, Ark.; Charleston, Mo.; Cairo, Mounds and Mound City, Ill.; Paducah, Uniontown, Sturgess, Covington, Henderson and Louisville, Ky.; Evansville, Ind., and Cincinnati and Portsmouth, Ohio.

A report on Red Cross activities including fair and unfair treatment of negro refugees was made to DeWitt Smith, director general of the Mississippi and Ohio valley flood disaster. Using this report as a basis of discussion, Mr. Smith and Mr. Frierson, assistant general director, and Mr. Glenn, in charge of personnel of the Red Cross, called a meeting of prominent negroes at Washington on April 26. After some three hours' deliberation, it was decided that as a future policy of the American Red Cross, adjustment should be made in the following directions:

1. Integration of negroes on all permanent advisory committees and on emergency advisory committees in time of disaster.

2. Registration of available colored nurses and colored social workers for use in future disasters.

3. Employment of negro staff representatives and other employes in the permanent setup of the American Red Cross to assure the negro groups ample protection and understanding of Red Cross procedure in the face of disasters.

4. Equalization of pay of white and colored employes in whatever localities they may be employed.

The question of differential in pay in case of geographical locations should be left as at present in the hands of headquarters authorities but within any designated district there should be no differential in pay between interracial groups.

Fifteen students in the department of business administration of Tuskegee Institute spent Thursday in Atlanta visiting prominent negro business enterprises on their return trip from Durham, N. C., where they went to inspect enterprises in that city.

TROTSKY PROBERS URGE MORE STUDY

Unofficial Committee Reports Exiled Russian's Case Warrants Inquiry.

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—An unofficial committee of inquiry which went to Mexico last month to question Leon Trotsky about the charges directed against him in the Moscow treason trials reported tonight that the exiled Russian had established a case "amply warranting further investigation."

The report was delivered by Professor John Dewey, committee chairman, at a mass meeting in Mecca temple, sponsored by the American Committee for the Defense of Trotsky.

"This record convinces us that Mr. Trotsky has established a case amply warranting further investigation," the report said. "Therefore we recommend that the work of this commission proceed to its conclusion."

BISHOP OF BERLIN DEFENDS CHURCH

Reich Catholic Leader Assails Campaign in Reply to Trials.

BERLIN, May 9.—(AP)—Count Konrad Von Preysing, Bishop of Berlin, today vigorously defended Catholicism against what he called an anti-church campaign. It was the Catholic leader's reply to the reich's recent series of immorality trials.

In a letter read in Catholic churches, he charged that attacks and accusations are being made against church authorities as though they ignored or tolerated occurrences which the church condemns.

"The church does not object to sentences being passed on culprits," the bishop's letter said, "but it does object emphatically to methods used systematically and with all means of propaganda, to assail the church, its teachings and its servants."

He said there were 90,000 lay brothers in Germany, and added that if 900 were arraigned, whose guilt he said had not been established, this would represent only 1 per cent.

"Do not be deceived," the letter said, "very powerful, loud-voiced forces are at work which are utilizing the present trials, coming just after a papal encyclical, to deprecate the Pope's utterances and represent Christian education of youth as undesirable."

In fact there were two of them fighting on his doorstep, but Peck scoffed at the suggestion they were battling for first place in line. He shot one of them and later found seven young wolves in a lair near-by.

DAWES FORECASTS MARKET COLLAPSE

Chicago Banker and Former Vice President Warns of 1939.

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP)—General Charles Gates Dawes, who forecast the end of the depression, predicted in a book for release tomorrow that 1939 would bring "another stock market collapse and a minor recession in business" lasting one or two years.

The Chicago banker and former vice president wrote:

"I predict, barring wars or inflation of the currency, that a high degree of prosperity will maintain in this country until 1939.

"That beginning in the latter part of the year October, 1938-October, 1939, to wit: In the summer or fall of 1939, there will be a stock market collapse.

"That there will then ensue in the United States a minor recession in business of one to two years.

"That this recession will be followed by a period of prosperity."

In the book, "How Long Prosperity?" Dawes traced a similarity in the history of the depressions of 1873, 1893 and 1929.

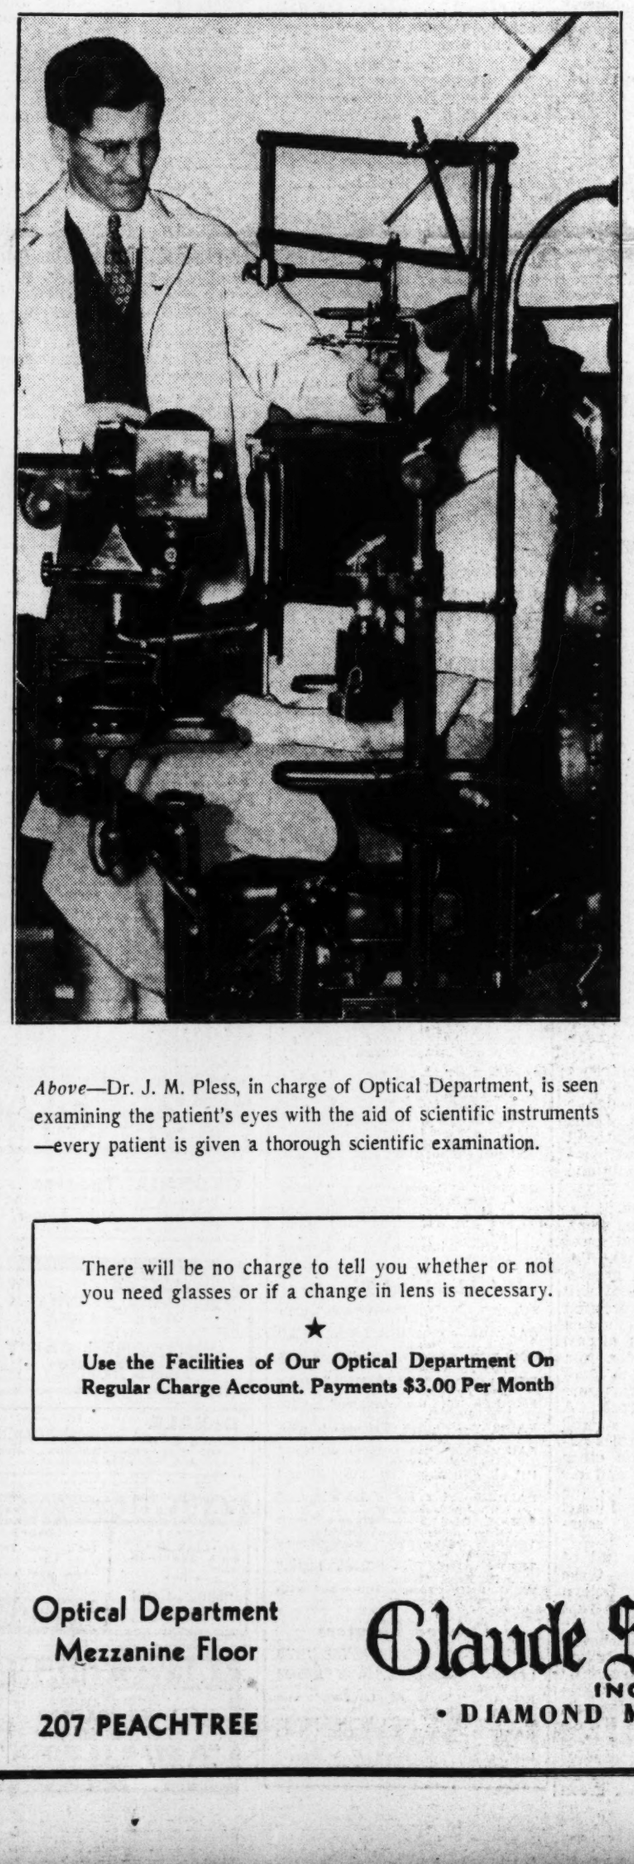

The book recites that Dawes, in December, 1934, predicted a contra-seasonal rise in demand for durable goods that would signalize the end of the depression. His forecast attracted nation-wide attention.

WHERE you have your eyes examined is of greatest importance

Only When Your Eyes Are Scientifically Examined By One Who Is Highly Skilled and Conscientious Are You Assured Of Getting Glasses To Suit Your Own Visual Requirements

It's a Pleasure To Have Your Eyes Examined At Claude S. Bennett's

Guesswork has been taken out of the fitting of glasses by the modern scientific equipment in Claude S. Bennett's Optical Department.

The optometrist does not have to guess, because, through his instruments, he can see your eyes, inside of them, the delicate parts around them that must be considered in fitting glasses.

You do not have to guess, because, as the optometrist changes combinations of lenses, he can watch the results and functions of the delicate muscles of your eyes and tell exactly when he has given you the combination that suits.

You do not have the annoyance of having to decide which of two almost identical lenses is the one you want. They look so much alike and yet the choice must be made so accurately or you can never know the complete comfort of perfectly fitted glasses. The modern equipment at Bennett's makes the decision more accurately than any human eye, especially a tired and strained eye that needs glasses, could possibly make it. This modern equipment substitutes scientific accuracy for the old "trial and error" method with its attendant guesswork.

It permits the fitting of glasses accurately without dilation of the eyes and the consequent inconvenience and loss of time.

Even if you do not need glasses now, come to Bennett's Optical Department.

See the ophthalmoscope through which the optometrist examines living blood vessels. See the retinoscope, the new refractor pupilometer and other equipment provided for your comfort when you do need glasses.

Your eyes will be comfortable because the glasses suit you so perfectly.

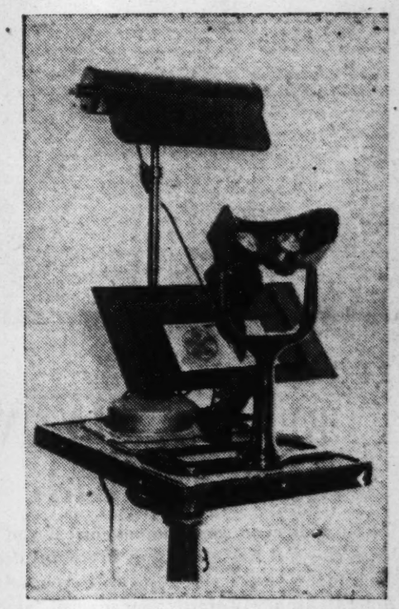

Your mind will be comfortable because you KNOW they are just what you need.

Above—Dr. J. M. Pless, in charge of Optical Department, is seen examining the patient's eyes with the aid of scientific instruments—every patient is given a thorough scientific examination.

There will be no charge to tell you whether or not you need glasses or if a change in lens is necessary.

RICH'S

Families Divided Among Themselves In Plans for Flower Show This Week

By Sally Forth.

NOT ONLY will clan vie with clan in the forthcoming flower show to be held at the Piedmont Driving Club on Wednesday and Thursday, but individual members of families will compete with each other for the coveted blue ribbons. For instance, Mrs. Vaughn Nixon will represent her garden club, the Mimosa, in the lovely French arrangement class, while her daughter, Mrs. William Parker Jr., the former Emmie Nixon, who is a valued member of the Cherokee Garden Club, will summon all her artistic ability in an arrangement for the same class.

Both mother and daughter are known for their marked artistic inclinations, so it will be interesting to see the floral charm created by these equally aesthetic competitors, and the judges will doubtless have a real problem on their hands.

Not only will Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Parker enter exhibits in the show, but the younger daughter of the family, Mrs. Malon Courts, is also in charge of a very difficult and important entry for still a third garden club, the Boxwood. Mrs. Courts has been at work for several weeks planning and constructing a cart for the flower cart class, which is one of the principal horticultural classes of the show.

In this class, representatives of each of the 12 member clubs of the flower show association, will enter a cart designed according to their own original ideas, and laden with the most beautiful and varied blossoms they can obtain, not only from their own gardens but from any of the gardens of the members of the clubs to which they belong. Great secrecy has veiled the ideas and schemes that are being carried out in the construction and arrangement of these carts, so it is not hard to imagine how difficult it must be for Mrs. Courts to guard her conversation and suppress her enthusiasm concerning her handiwork around members of her own family who are members of competing clubs.

AND SPEAKING of the flower show, there is a pilgrimage under way among members of the Canton, the Monticello and the Amicalola Garden Clubs who will motor to Atlanta en masse Wednesday to view the floral beauty to be displayed under the artistic guidance of Atlanta horticultural leaders. The visitors will fill several cars and plan to meet at St. Philips Cathedral at 11 o'clock to visit a few near-by gardens, then have luncheon and later attend the show at the Driving Club.

In the group will be none other than that beloved Mrs. Robert H. Martin who, with her charming husband resides at the Tate Estates but with whom Atlantans refuse to sever claim. Mrs. Martin is a member of the Iris Garden Club, but she takes an active interest and is a popular figure at meetings and affairs staged by members of the aforementioned groups from north Georgia. Last week she entertained at a lovely luncheon at her Cracrow for Mrs. Carl Lewis, also a member of the Iris Club, who motored to the mountains to be guest speaker at the meeting of the Amicalola Garden Club.

A profusion of pink azaleas from the woods surrounding Cracrow were used as the decorations and after luncheon the guests, including Mrs. Edgar Martin, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Ormsby, of Burlington, Ill.; Mrs. Walter Tate, president of club; Mrs. Fred MacDonald and members of the club motored down the mountain to Tate for the meeting which included an impromptu flower show arranged by the members. Mrs. Lewis spoke on "A Border of Successive Blooms," and with her delightful French accent proved a charming speaker.

IT SEEMS that since closing her successful debutante season, Charlotte Sage has again turned into a college belle. Having just returned from Princeton University, where she attended the spring house parties on the campus of this renowned institution, Charlotte is now planning to attend the commencement festivities at the University of Virginia in early June.

In the meantime she will enjoy the whirl of parties given in Memphis during the Cotton Carnival Week. She left yesterday for the Tennessee city to be the guest of Adeline Heiskell, who had the distinction of being the only debutante in Memphis last season.

Charlotte and Adeline were classmates at King-Smith school in Washington. Sally hears that Charlotte selected a most becoming dress to wear to the brilliant Cotton Carnival ball. Fashioned of hyacinth blue net, the dress is posed over shell-pink taffeta and boasts a bouffant skirt reaching to ankle length, and short puffed sleeves. Which, to Sally's way of thinking, is stunning for Charlotte's striking brunet beauty.

MEDALS OF HONOR IN ARTS PROPOSED

Texan Suggests Congressional Recognition for Civilian Accomplishments.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(UP) Representative Maverick, Texas, Democrat, tonight proposed a congressional medal of honor for service in arts and science as well as for military and naval heroes. He suggested 12 names of famous living Americans for a tentative list of likely medal recipients.

Maverick said that now the chief rewards to outstanding American writers, artists, scientists and social leaders come from foreign countries.

"The time has come for Americans to honor themselves instead of receiving awards from abroad," Maverick said. "We could establish a nobility of arts and science in this country."

The tentative list included:

Dr. Charles A. Beard, economist and historian.
Thomas Benton, midwestern artist.
George Birkhoff, Harvard mathematician and educator.
George Washington Carver, negro educator and scientist.
Edward A. Filene, Boston businessman.
George Gershwin, composer.
William J. Mayo, physician and surgeon.
Senator George W. Norris, political leader.
Carl Sandburg, poet and Lincoln biographer.
Monsignor John A. Ryan, Washington Catholic leader.

MARTIN WILL MARK HISTORIC AIR FEAT

Plane Builder To Retrace Route of First Round Trip Over Water Hop.

AVALON, Cal., May 9.—(AP)—Twenty-five years ago an unknown youth named Glenn Martin made aviation history in the first round-trip overwater flight.

Next Monday, the 25th anniversary of his daring feat, the famed builder of mighty warplanes and clipper ships will re-enact that flight from the southern California coast to Santa Catalina island and back—64 miles in all.

It was a clear day when Martin wheeled out his shaky plane at Newport harbor. The craft was a biplane constructed in his backyard, powered with a reconstructed motor.

Martin made the trip without mishap, flying at an altitude of around 2,000 feet.

After a short delay, Martin took off for the return trip, but head winds slowed him down, and it wasn't until after dark that he reached the mainland.

World praise and decorations followed.

Martin's anniversary flight will be over the same route. But he won't fly alone this time, and his ship will be one of his huge clippers.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By ELY CULBERTSON.
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily installments.

THE NO TRUMP RESPONSE.

A no trump response to take-out double always is encouraging, showing at least one honor trick and, often, more. With a stopper in the opponents' suit, respond withone no trump (unless a major suit response is available), provided the hand contains at least one honor trick.

The double bid being one heart, bid one no trump with:

Spade J 6 3, heart Q 10 7, diamond K 8 5 4, club 6 5 2. This rule is not followed when the one honor trick is the ace of the opponents' suit, and the hand has nothing else of value, but does contain a four-card length.

With spade 8 6 3 heart A 7 diamond 10 6 4 2 club 8 5 4 3 bid two diamonds, not one no trump, over one heart doubled. With spade 8 6 3, heart A 8 5 4, diamonds 6 3 2, clubs 9 7 3, it is necessary to bid one no trump.

TODAY'S HAND.

As every player knows, there are many hands in which the only precisely proper bid would be two and one-half or three and one-half of such and such a bid In other words, a single raise is too conservative and a double raise is too aggressive. Of course, the laws do not permit half bids, but in effect a player can represent just such bids, not in one round of bidding, but in successive rounds. Consider the proper bidding of today's hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	4 spades	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	5 spades	Pass
6 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

After the opening bid of one club, the noncommittal response of one diamond and the rebid of one spade, North's hand warranted a two and one-half spade bid. Since it always is better to have something in reserve rather than overbid, North correctly gave only a single raise. But when South went back to three clubs, North then compensated for his previous forced conservation by jumping, thus completing the picture that his previous bid had been an underbid. South then fell back on the four-five no trump convention and, of course, the partnership reached the good spot of six spades.

West opened the diamond king and continued diamonds. South ruffed the second round and drew the opposing trumps. Then, although his own trumps were gone and clubs did not break, he had no difficulty in fulfilling the contract. The king of clubs and a club to the ace revealed the situation. A third round, ruffed with dummy's last trump, cleared the club suit, and declarer's ace of hearts was an entry for bringing home the remaining club tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Partner made an opening bid for two spades. Next hand passed. I held:

Spade 6 2 heart Q J 10 9 8 6 4 spade J 9 8 club 9. It is absolutely necessary to bid two no trump instead of showing the heart suit on the first round?

Answer: If you are playing the Culbertson system you must respond first with two no trump to show that your hand contains less than one-plus honor trick. Show your heart suit on the second round of bidding.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

JUST NUTS

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK CITY, Friday.—Last night I left Seattle. It was a beautiful day and, after spending a very brief time with my daughter at her office, we went off for a drive to the Cascade mountains.

There we lunched at Canyon Creek lodge, a very unique place. The dining room is entirely panelled in handwrought cedar shakes. The natural grain of the wood makes such an intricate pattern on the wall that no artist could have produced with paint and brush.

We were home by 4 o'clock to greet a few guests at tea and to talk with the grandchildren concerning the short visit we had paid to their classrooms in the morning. A very charming woman is head of this school, and I liked the children's teachers and the bright and sunny atmosphere of the school.

Afterwards, we went down to the school auditorium, which is also used at noon hour as a lunchroom. We stepped into the kitchen for a minute and met the very sweet-faced capable woman who presides over the school lunches and trains some of the girls as her assistants. This gives them the practical experience which they need so much to be useful in their own homes.

The children had supper with us and then I left for the airport. It's grand to see one's children, but always hard to leave them. However, I hope they will be visiting in the east before many months have elapsed, and I shall certainly look forward to my next visit in Seattle.

Some of you may remember that I told you when I was in the mood I would give you that other inscription from a Charleston, South Carolina, tombstone in St. Michael's churchyard. Here it is:

James Louis Pettigru, born at Abbeville, May 10th, 1789.
Justice, orator, statesman, patriot.
Future time will hardly know how great a life
This simple stone commemorates.
The traditions of his eloquence, his
Wisdom and his wit may fade,
But he lived for ends more durable than fame.
His eloquence was the protection of the poor and wronged.
His learning illuminated the principles of law.

In admiration of his peers
In the respect of his people
In the affection of his family
His was the highest place.

The just meed
Of his kindness and forebearance
Of his dignity and simplicity
His brilliant genius and his unwearied industry.

Unawed by opinion
Unseduced by flattery
Undismayed by disaster
He confronted life with antique courage
And death with Christian hope.
In the great Civil War
He withstood his people for his country
But his people did homage to the man
Who held his conscience higher than their praise.

And his country
Heaped her honors on the grave of the patriot
To whom, living,
His own righteous self-respect sufficied
Alike for motive and reward.
Died at Charleston, March 9th, 1863.

I am about to arrive, and after filing this will proceed to Hyde Park for the week end.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

IS IT NERVES OR BRAIN?

Adrenin, secreted into the blood by the adrenal glands under the influence of the fighting emotions, mobilizes or liberates sugar from the liver into the blood stream, where it is available for instant use as fuel for muscular energy used in combat or in flight.

Civilized man learns to repress or restrain the natural impulse to fight or run away, but only as a veneer of culture. Dissolve the veneer with alcohol and you will find it is extremely thin. The automatic or autonomic or unconscious part of man, all of his vital organs and a preponderant part of his nervous system and his vital functions, are still primitive, apparently not changed or even slightly modified by centuries of civilization and culture. Education and training, breeding, courtesy, refinement, religion, morality, patriotism and other embellishments tend to restrain all natural or primitive impulses or rather to prevent natural expression of the emotions. The charming hostess smiles at you even though she would like to bite your ear off or scratch your eyes out. The business tycoon prides himself on his ability to mask his true feelings in his dealings with others. This sort of dissembling is highbrow, whereas everybody knows it is lowbrow to betray your true feelings and especially to express your emotions.

Highbrows are generally short-lived. Lowbrows live long—if they escape the sudden, violent death which is the natural fate of wild animals.

Culture, breeding and refinement got in some hard blows against longevity when it imposed upon society the conspiracy of silence which has only recently been broken.

A man who had just retired from active business life to attempt the impossible, that is, he hoped to catch up on play now that he had time for it, turned up his toes the other day, passed in his checks, apoplexy. For several years the poor gink, with characteristic Yankee complacency, had been fooling with his "high blood pressure" and complaining that this doctor had told him so and so and that doctor had told him something else and so he doubted that doctors know much about it and anyway they didn't seem to understand his case (as well as he thought he understood it). It was his nerves, he was certain. His nerves were weak. And so he died. Apoplexy, the death certificate read. Brain weakness would be an honest diagnosis.

Many men headed for the same dramatic finish right now ascribe their "purely functional" trouble to gas, indigestion, this or that food or some similar absurdity. It seems that individuals in the incipient stage of cardio-vascular disease (heart-artery wearing out) hate to acknowledge what really ails them. Indeed they seldom submit to a voluntary medical examination until some untoward complication frightens them into the doctor's office.

Practically every portion of the United States has poisonous snakes though few are reported in certain states in the northeast.

I don't want to do it, it's an effort;
I have my mind somewhere else.
It's finished now, not at all well done,
Rather rushed through and looks it.

The lines that are curved
Were meant to be straight,
The sky is a sunrise,
It was meant to be late—
Where there's a mountain,
My thought was a lake.

Am I about myself dejected,
Lazily or temperamentally infected?
Are you as I—
Or are you just right,
On any subject
That comes in sight?

A Regal Perfume, the Pre-Coronation Craze of Coronation-Mad London

By LILLIAN MAE.

Sweeping along on the crest of the wave of excitement that heralds the crowning of a new monarch, one of the manufacturers of a grand and ever-reliable line of cosmetics, has put out a royally emblazoned package containing a perfume which, it is said, has taken pre-coronation London like a royal command. And after seeing the bottle and using the delightfully exotic contents, I must say that I admire more than ever the elegant taste of our brothers and sisters across the sea.

So formal and dignified an odor it is that you will feel as beguiling as a visiting princess when you use a little of this exciting perfume.

If you can't be in London this week—and the names of those of us who can't is legion—you can at least get the regal feeling by dressing up your boudoir with this handsome bottle and touching forehead, ears and arms with the entrancing perfume.

Best of all, you'll be "surprised to death" at the reasonable price, after my wild raving over the virtues and beauty of this Coronation souvenir remindful of ostrich plumes, long white gloves and lovely ladies curtsying low to a royal presence.

Your curiosity concerning the name of this perfume and where it can be purchased may be satisfied by calling me at my office in The Constitution building. If you do not live in Atlanta, be sure to accompany your request with a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

CAN YOU CAN SUCCESSFULLY?

Remember that smell in the kitchen when Aunt Mary was "putting up" those delicious jars of canned fruit and berries and vegetables?

The good old-fashioned art of canning has been developed by modern methods of quicker and easier handling, but the taste of those home-canned fruits out of the preserve jar always will be one of the best tastes imaginable.

If you are planning to do some home canning during the berry and fruit season this year, you'll want our Washington Service Bureau's comprehensive and authoritative 24-page bound booklet. It gives complete directions for canning not only fruits, berries, and vegetables, but meats, fish, and soups, too.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I am not dumb and I am not hard to look at but the boys date the other girls and leave me out. When I am with the boys I can't think of anything to say and they all wait for me to bring up a new subject. I never have been a talker even at home with the family, but the cat gets my tongue when there's a boy near by. You won't believe me if I tell you how unhappy this makes me. It is a shadow over my whole life. A girl ought to have at least one boyfriend and I have none.

FRIGHTENED.

Answer:

Have you tried the plan of asking leading questions of the boys and listening attentively to their answers? (No fair scrambling for another question until you have heard the reply to the first). Have you made the effort to find out what your girl friend's beaux are interested in? Have you watched the come-hither girl at work with her boy-friends? Do you belong to a bunch of girls that hang together and have fun with or without the boys? Have you ever invited the crowd to your home for a party? Have you ever asked a girl friend who has more bids than she can handle to run you in on a blind date with one of her extras? If not, try these tricks and see if you can't plug in on the fun.

The lone wolf doesn't fare well in social life, unless she happens to be a natural born beau-catcher. Even in that case she misses a lot of fun that the members of a crowd have; for the boys are on the look-out for gaiety and good times. They enjoy double dating, bunching up, going places and doing things in crowds. Some of the boys, too, are shy and rather like the moral support of having other guys and other gals along on the dates and dances. A single date with a quiet sister is not their idea of hilarity, however much sense she has.

Of all the tricks a girl can employ to attract the men, nothing is so effective as a show of warm friendliness. Just watch a come-hither girl look up at her boy friend. Maybe she doesn't say a word but her eyes are eloquent. They tell him that he is the one person above all others that she wants to see. Her eyes invite him to talk and they devour his words as he lets them fall. Her eyes register enthusiasm, humour, seriousness or sadness as the conversation demands. She hooks him with a look.

Pleasant Homes

By ELIZABETH McRAE BOYKIN.

IN LONDON TOWN.

The gentlemen in fancy dress who stand guard over the royal jewels in the Tower of London never impressed us so much, though we do think they're very decorative on a dingy street.

At Home With An Earl and His Countess.

Because the English accent in living always pleased us a lot more. Several years ago we recollect taking pictures for an article about the home of the Earl and Countess of Iddesleigh, who live in a stone's throw of Westminster Abbey. They have a small compact old house in town—one room to the floor and five floors high—where they live with their two unbelievably golden children.

The Dining Room.

The dining room, which you enter from the street, has pale walls and built-in cupboards in which Lady Iddesleigh keeps her fine collection of fans. Over the mantel there is a Dutch flower painting and a floral screen repeats the flower motif. The little sitting room adjoins in an alcove and contributes details of old gold in furniture coverings.

Upstairs.

Upstairs Lady Iddesleigh's bedroom is quite spacious with the large old carved bed set in an alcove, leaving the floor space of the room proper very pleasantly open for a tea table in front of the fireplace and two easy chairs there.

On the floor above that is the nursery, while the top floor of the house is a library lined with books, highlighted with brasses and furnished with deeply comfortable furniture covered in deep rich blue.

Very Domestic.

A very domestic unpretentious establishment this for a family of high rank. We like to think of them here in their pleasant little house, raising a family like the rest of us—and in no grander a setting, although they maintain here an atmosphere of gracious dignity that gives an aura of glamor even to so very small a house. That's a point to think about in ordering our lives and manners, even in a simple setting.

It's interesting that the young couple living quietly in this small house will have spectacular places in England's great coronation pageant, for an Earl and a Countess get to wear umpty umph ermine tails on their capes!

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

YOUNG POSTURE DEFENSE AGAINST AGE.

It's a woman's privilege to subtract a few years from her age—provided a dowager's hump and a double chin do not insult the eyesight of her friends.

These figure-aging defects can make you look older than you actually are. A pad of fat on the nape of the neck adds a good five years to any woman's looks, and a sagging chinline does no favors, either!

The sad part is, you have only your posture to blame for the unwelcome and untimely appearance of these twin traitors to loveliness. Constantly carrying the head forward allows the fat cells to collect on the back of the neck, and gives an ugly line to chin and neck in front.

If you want to get the true effect of incorrect posture, stand before a full length mirror and, with the aid of a hand mirror, look at yourself sidewide. Let the head poke slightly forward—not too much, just about as you would in reading or sewing—and then tuck the chin in. See what I mean?

All right, pull yourself up straight and tall, with an up-lift extending from the lower abdominal wall, diaphragm, chest, chin, and the top of the head. Now, look at yourself in the hand mirror, and see how much younger you look. Isn't that posture worth cultivating?

Pulling up with the entire body creates the youthful right angle of the chin, and you will find that the dowagers' hump and a youthful chinline do not pair together. To correct one defect is to get rid of the other. But the upward lift of good posture begins with the lower abdominal wall, which may be strengthened by the following exercise:

Position—Sit on a low stool and tuck the toes under the lower edge of a heavy piece of furniture, to anchor yourself.

Movement—Place the hands on the hips and slowly lower the body backward until the trunk is horizontal. Pause for a second and slowly return to the upright position.

This is a strenuous exercise, and you should not attempt it more than two times at the beginning. It is also a thorough-going exercise, however, and you can put it to work on the neckline by tensing the neck muscles as the body is lowered backward, then tilting the chin back still farther while the body is in horizontal position

Stretching exercises of various sorts are splendid developers of lovely posture, and they are sudden death to such defects as double chins—or waistline bulges. Stretch the head high and rotate it slowly on the shoulders for the neckline. Stretch the body high and rotate the trunk in wide, easy circles for the waistline.

Go to work on your posture and you will eliminate the necessity of having to deal separately with the bumps or bulges that make the figure older.

This strengthens the abdominal wall.

ATLANTA OPEN SLATED TODAY AT DRUID HILLS

Charley Yates Surprise Entry; Beckett, Hughes Defend Honors.

By ROY WHITE.

Atlanta's golfers will open their annual tournament schedule at 9 o'clock this morning on the Druid Hills course in a 36-hole medal play in the fifth annual Atlanta open championship tournament.

Dr. Julius Hughes and Howard Beckett are the defending champions and will top the list of favorites for today's play. Dr. Hughes won the amateur medal and was low scorer last year on the Capital City course, while Beckett nosed out Harold Sargent, young assistant professional at the East Lake course, for professional honors.

Today's tournament, the first to be sponsored by the Atlanta Golf Association, is open to every golfer living within the greater Atlanta limits. And the only tournament which will be wide open to every player, regardless of club affiliation.

18 IN MORNING.

Eighteen holes will be played this morning and another 18 in the afternoon starting around 2 o'clock.

The field will be divided into Class A and B, following the morning round. The low scoring amateur and all the professionals will be placed in Class A, with the remaining amateurs in Class B.

Prizes will be awarded the three lowest scores in Class A and the lowest score in Class B. The low scoring professional will receive a cash award.

The entry list closed at 6 o'clock last night, but due to many of the players being out of the city, honoring their mothers, the Atlanta Golf Association has extended the entry to 9 o'clock this morning.

Today's late entries will be started as conveniently as possible and they are urged to be present at 8:30 o'clock, if possible, to be sure of a suitable starting time.

The order of play in the afternoon will be the same as that in the morning and play will most likely be in threesomes.

YATES SURPRISES.

Charlie Yates entered the tournament in a last-minute surprise. It is his first major tournament in Atlanta in several years. Yates last year played and won the Junior Chamber tournament, but today marks his first entry in a city tourney since winning the Georgia amateur twice in succession several years ago.

Yates, a former city champion, is paired with Dr. Julius Hughes, the defending champion and Tommy Barnes, captain of the Georgia Tech golf team. Barnes is the defending city champion and completes the only "Atlanta champion" threesome today.

THE PAIRINGS.

8:30—Virgil Jones, George Thomas and Russell Bridges.
8:45—W. R. Rogers, Joe Petoski and S. B. Turner.
8:50—P. Schier, E. C. Davis and Weyman Jones.

Hill and Irby Lose Exhibition.

Charlie and Dave Black, two former Georgia amateur champions, defeated Harvey Hill and Alton Irby, 1 up, Sunday afternoon in an exhibition match on the College Park municipal course.

Hill had the best score of the foursome, a 75, with Charlie Black only two strokes back.

It was the second of a series of regular weekly exhibitions on Sunday afternoon, free to the public.

Charlie Ozmer, with a 70, won low-scoring honor for the day at College Park. Ozmer had five birdies, to finish two strokes under par.

Weekly Dogfite Draws 16 Foresomes.

East Lake golfers set another new record for Sunday afternoon play when 16 foursomes participated in the weekly dogfite on the No. 2 course.

And despite the large entry, only one foursome, Cliff Eley, W. H. Calhoun, E. H. Henderson and R. B. Smith finished out in front with 118 strokes.

K. A. Stephenson, J. O. Porter, George Elliott and E. A. Burtzloff finished one stroke back for second place, with Dan Yates, H. H. Arnold, A. M. Patton and R. R. Garrison, third.

Other foursomes finishing in the prize list were George Sargent, Robert. Ingram, M. Pickens and A. V. B. Gilbert; William Johnson, C. C. Crawford, Don Bemler and C. S. Moeckel; P. G. Lombard, F. R. Somers, L. F. Meng and H. S. Roberts; Dr. B. B. Gay, A. P. McElroy, A. T. Bassett and Dr. C. Wilhite, and F. H. Whiting, H. P. Bond, S. M. Haw and John Lonergan.

HORSE DESTROYED.

BALTIMORE, May 9.—(UP)—Triple Action, a candidate for next Saturday's Preakness, was destroyed today because of burns the racehorse suffered when fire swept a stable at Pimlico race track last night. A total of 17 horses were burned.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 9.—Before leaving the Downs Saturday night I went over to Melodist's stable.

There was an air of sadness there. I looked in, one small electric globe, lighting the scene.

Melodist was nibbling hay.

"Melodist," I said. "Melodist, old boy, what was the matter?"

He turned his head and looked sadly upon the world as he munched his hay. Fourth place was the best he could do. He looked forlorn.

Around on the other side of the stable "Handy" Hamblin was on duty. He hasn't been more than two feet from War Admiral a single night since last June. And he was even closer last night.

I saluted one of the greatest Derby winners; the horse that was second in speed to Twenty Grand, which holds the record. There had been a theory the little brown colt was too little and that he couldn't shoulder those 126 pounds and carry them to the front in a mile and a quarter. The theory was no good at all. He shouldered Charley Kurtsinger and led all the way—a fast stout-hearted little horse.

Back at Melodist's stall I paused for a farewell. He is a great looking horse and he ran a great race finishing fourth.

"Gwine to ship him to the Preakness. Maybe he git 'at Wah Admiral den," said a colored boy hopefully.

But I don't think so. A Melodist hasn't much chance with a War Admiral, not when the Admiral is a son of Man o' War with some of the old man's greatness.

It wasn't a horse race, there was just one horse with a chance. He won.

AFTER THE DERBY.

After the Derby crowd was gone, the Downs presented a curious appearance, as dusk came in there were thousands of boxes, newspapers, programs, torn and abandoned mutuel tickets covering the terraces and the clubhouse sections.

The greatest crowd in Derby history, some 70,000 or more, has left its mark. It was a gay crowd. The exhausted staff of the clubhouse cocktail bar, the swank bar, were checking up. The figures are interesting. This bar was one of four more at the Downs.

"This bar sold," said the weary steward, "just 165 cases of mixed drinks, they will average about 29 drinks to the bottle. You can figure it up."

The result is indicative of the thirst of the Derby crowd. It figures 57,420 drinks from that one bar. And that did not include soft drinks of which one popular brand was sold, or beer. With returns in from all bars it probably would average about three mixed drinks for every person present.

THE BETTING.

The crowd shoved $1,535,104 through the mutuel windows on Derby Day. Of that $585,106 was waged on the Derby.

The breakdown of the figures is interesting. The Courier Journal presented a chart of the betting. Of the more than half-million dollars wagered on the Derby, $215,926 was bet in amounts of $2. Of this $94,846 was bet straight, $59,466 was place bets and $61,634 on show.

Five-dollar bets totalled $125,550. Of this $64,210 was bet to win, $30,965 to place and $30,375 to show.

There was $109,030 in $10 bets and $134,600 bet in amounts of $50, these betting $50 or more had their minds made up. They bet $75,750 of their total on straight tickets.

The $100 window was abolished a few years ago. The Derby Saturday saw a new record in $50 bets. All of which, along with the alcoholic statistics, may give one a fair idea of what a gay and spending mood the crowd was in.

TWO LADIES ON A BOX.

There were two ladies with one box at the Derby. The unreserved sections are always filled with abandoned boxes and crates when the Derby is done.

They had one box and dialogue, as Derby time neared, was as follows:

"Now when it starts, you stand on it for the first half of the race. I will stand on it for the last."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of taking advantage of you. You see the first half."

"No, really, I won't be selfish, you stand there first."

"Well, it's awfully generous of you. I know you would prefer to see the start."

And the reporter who told me insisted he believed they really meant it.

KURTSINGER POPULAR.

Charley Kurtsinger, whose birthplace may be seen from the Churchill Downs grandstand and who grew up with horses, handled his winning horse perfectly. He had no trouble to contend with since he travels fastest who travels alone, and War Admiral certainly traveled alone.

Kurtsinger had just one test. He had had to rate his own pace. And his test came in the stretch when Pompoon challenged.

But Kurtsinger definitely had not overdone the pace. When he touched the little brown colt he had enough to go on at a faster pace. And those who thought the colt was too little saw then he was a very big little horse.

All of which demonstrated once more that the pre-Derby workouts mean nothing at all. Two of the fastest workouts in past years at the Derby distance were by Heelfly this year and Boxthorn a year ago. Neither came close to being in the money.

Melodist had shown, perhaps, the best workouts of all. But the race demonstrated what had been delivered before the race. And that was the field generally was rather mediocre. As it turned out, there was one good horse in the lot.

Kurtsinger's victory was popular. He is at the peak of his career and it is not too much to expect that he will win a third Derby within the next year or so and join Earl Sande.

Sande, incidentally, saw enough Saturday. He will not send Sceneshifter to run against War Admiral.

THE FARMERS HAPPY.

The farmers, I hope are very happy.

They would have been delighted to see the prices their products were bringing at the hotel dining tables on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

A breakfast menu will suffice. At one of the leading hotels the prices ran in this order:

One baked apple, 40 cents; two eggs, 50 cents; two eggs and ham, 95 cents; toast, 20 cents; coffee, 10 cents, and so on. The suckers never complain and their number seems to increase. It must be true as the late Diamond Jim Brady said "It's fun to be a sucker if you can afford it."

And at the Derby, those who can't, seem to enjoy it just the same. It remains one of the two or three great spectacles on the American scene. And the most publicized two minutes and a few seconds in the world.

Vols Divide With Pelicans; Barons, Smokies Split Twin Bill.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Taft Wright slammed out a home run in the ninth inning of the first game with two on to give the Chattanooga Lookouts a 3-to-2 victory over Memphis before entering the abbreviated game of the Sunday double-header which was called at 4-all in the eighth because of darkness.

Nashville and New Orleans split a twin bill, the Vols taking the nightcap, 5 to 4, after dropping the opener, 9 to 5.

The second game was called at the end of the sixth on account of darkness. Willie Duke got his first home run of the season.

The Knoxville Smokies snapped a five-game losing streak by taking the first game of a double-header from Birmingham, 9 to 5. The Barons came back and took the second, 5 to 1.

The Old Personality Horse Wins Again

Tony, the old personality horse, was the winner in the ladies' jumping class of the Atlanta horse show yesterday afternoon at Fort McPherson. Tony was ridden by Mrs. Dave Hedekin. The children always like to see Tony in action, because before the big white horse takes a jump, he twirls his tail with a rotary motion and then sails over the cross-bars with all the grace of a swan in flight. He's quite a showman, is Tony.

TOP LADY BEST IN HORSE SHOW

Columbus Entry Wins 2 Events as Atlanta Meet Closes.

Top Lady, a chestnut mare, owned by B. H. Hardaway, of Columbus, took top honors in the final day of the eighth annual Atlanta horse show, winning the fine harness class and coming back to win the five-gaited championship and stake. Peggy's Majesty, owned by Bob McCleary and ridden by Pauline Sternenberg, was reserve champion, with Avalon, owned and ridden by T. F. Dye taking third place.

In fine harness, Georgiana's Stable's Perfect Picture took second to Top Lady, while Easter Afternoon, belonging to the same stables and driven by little Miss Renee Fletcher, was third.

The junior five-gaited stake was won by Mrs. Ralph G. Lockwood's handsome chestnut gelding, Peavine's Play Boy, Jimmy Martin up. Tinkie Lee, owned and ridden by Matt Cole Lee, of Macon, was second; Jules Genius, ridden by Margaret McKissack, third; Belinda Peavine, owned by Mrs. William Ward Jr., fourth.

Atlanta's favorite, Tony, received an ovation from the crowd when he won the ladies' jumping class with Mrs. D. D. Hedekin up. Brown Eyes, ridden by Mrs. Hedekin, took second money. Mrs. I. T. Wyche took third and fourth places on Swiftly Home and Silent Sam.

The jumping championship was won by Lieutenant D. D. Hedekin on Brown Eyes; second place went to Bluepoint, of the Fort Benning horse show team, Major Kramer Thomas, up; third, Auburn's entry, Come On, ridden by Private Freyhouse.

In the three-gaited pony class, little Miss Anne Thornton won a popular victory on Peter Pan. Second, Belle Artiste, ridden by Pete Fletcher. Third, Jumping Jack, ridden by Sam McConnell; fourth, Big E Nuff, ridden by Billy Boyd.

Turf World Praises Little War Admiral

Son of Man o' War Seeks to Duplicate Famous Sire's Feat; Enters Preakness Saturday.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 9.—(AP)—To capture the Preakness and duplicate the feat accomplished by his famous sire, Man o' War, 17 years ago, was the goal set tonight for War Admiral, which yesterday galloped into a permanent niche among race horse immortals by his decisive triumph in the 63d Kentucky Derby.

Will the little, dark brown colt owned by Samuel D. Riddle, Philadelphia sportsman, go on to become the most famous son of the "big red?"

That was a major topic discussed in racing circles as War Admiral, his trainer, tall, grey-haired George Conway, and his rider, blond Charley Kurtsinger, headed east to return to racing wars along the Atlantic seaboard.

Although the "navy" colt was the second get of Man o' War to win the Derby, a title his daddy never won because he never raced in Kentucky, it was the consensus that the Riddle farm's star stood on the threshold of a career that may lead to his establishment of one of the most brilliant records for a 3-year-old for all time.

To equal the performance of Man o' War, however, the present 1937 equine king has a long row to hoe. After the Preakness comes the Belmont Stakes and the Withers mile, both won by his famous sire.

The only other Man o' War offspring to win the Derby was Clyde Van Dusen in 1929. His victory was an upset and he never won another big race.

As the passenger train carrying War Admiral and six other Derby horses in five special cars left Louisville this morning, attention of the turf world shifted from the bluegrass country to Baltimore, where the $50,000 added Preakness will be renewed for the 47th time next Saturday at Pimlico race course.

In addition to the Derby champion, those leaving for the east, were Pompoon, Melodist, Merry Maker, Clodion, Court Scandal and Sir Damion. With the exception of two, all the colts were reported to have survived the Derby in "good shape." Clodion, pulled up lame after the race and Sir Damion suffered a leg laceration.

Approximately $1,575,000 was bet through the mutuel windows during the eight-race program, the greatest Derby Day total since 1930. More than a half million was wagered on the Derby alone.

While the turf world acclaimed War Admiral, C. F. (Danny) Clark, trainer of Pompoon, who made no excuses for the son of Pompey in the Derby, predicted that Jerome H. Louchheim's colt would give War Admiral a "tougher" battle in the Preakness.

Adams Meets Eddie Elzea Tonight

Tonight's the night that Jack Adams, the one-man riot squad, and Eddie Elzea, the devastating Danish grappler, come to grips at the Key arena, across from the James L. Key golf course.

It's regarded as one of the most promising matches of the season. Adams, known in some sections as the One-Man Gang, has a reputation of being one of the roughest light-heavies in the game.

They're two of a kind, for that matter. Elzea is no shrinking violet. He is the kind that likes to be where the action is hottest.

At the request of many fans who wanted to see Adams met at his own game, Promoters Roby and Bettis selected Elzea, former racing driver, as the one to put the soft pedal on the One-Man Gang.

In another great match, Tony Papalino, the hard-hitting Italian, takes on Paddy Nolan, the Irish Killer. This will be another thriller.

There will be four matches in all and the usual popular prices prevail. Reserved seats may be obtained by calling Main 2539.

Black Crackers Beat Asheville Twin Bill

Atlanta Black Crackers will seek their third straight win over Asheville Tourists when the teams clash in the final of the series at Ponce de Leon park this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The home team walloped the invaders twice Sunday, 9-1, 8-1, behind fine pitching by Green, who hurled both contests.

The Black Crackers have now won eight straight games. After today's battle they play Jacksonville at Albany, Ga., Wednesday, then invade the east for two weeks before returning here.

BOBBY DURHAM WINS NIGHTCAP DESPITE RALLY

Leonard Kayoed in First, But Lindsey Loses; Luby Gets 6 for 7.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 9.—Upwards of 7,000, the largest crowd in the history of Travelers' field, watched the Little Rock Travelers and the Atlanta Crackers divide a double-header here this afternoon. Little Rock won the opener, 8 to 7, and Atlanta the second, 7 to 5.

While the Travelers lost the shorter affair, it was the first game lost on home soil. Little Rock had won seven straight here until the 1936 champions won their first game in five starts.

Bobby Durham, Eddie Moore's chunky curveballer, coasted to victory in the second despite a Traveler four-run uprising in the 7th.

Atlanta salted away the battle in the second ining by shelling Lee Rogers, Byron Humphreys and Dick Midkiff for seven runs as the result of as many singles.

Dutch Leonard, the Cracker knuckler, failed to finish the first game but managed to stay out of the loss column. Jim Lindsey, who relieved Leonard in the seventh, remained in long enough to be charged with the defeat. Trexler finished for the invaders.

ANYBODY'S GAME.

The first game was strictly a see-saw affair. Atlanta grabbed a one-run lead in the first but the Travelers amassed three in the third and another in the fifth to take a 4 to 1 lead. Then the Crax knotted the count with a three run splurge in the sixth.

From then on the game had the large crowd on their feet when the Georgians took a two run lead in the seventh. Chatham started the frame with a double and Leonard, first to face relief pitcher Humphreys, sacrificed. Luby bunted nicely down the third base line to squeeze Chatham across with the first run. Mailho followed with a double and scored when Hooks hooked a single off O'Neill's glove. Richards skied.

Little Rock was even hotter in the seventh. Five hits off Leonard and Lindsey and an outfield fly off Trexler accounted for four runs, going ahead 8 to 6. Trexler faced only two men to retire the Travelers in the seventh. Niemiec flied out and Liberto hit into a double play.

CRACKERS THREATEN.

The Crackers threatened seriously in the ninth. Todd, pinch hitting for Trexler, singled and stopped at second on Luby's one bagger. Mailho popped to Niemic in short right.

The Travelers second sacker, attempting to double Luby off first, threw wildly. Todd scored and Luby raced to second. Poindexter fanned Hooks, ending the game.

Luby was the batting star of the day. He got four for four in

Hubbell Wins 20th Straight, 4-1; Yankees Lose 4th in Row

DIZ DEAN BEATS BROOKLYN, 7 TO 1, IN 5TH TRIUMPH

Rube Marquard Only Pitcher to Match Hubbell's Record.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Carl Hubbell today became the second man in all baseball history to pitch 20 consecutive victories. Before the largest crowd of the season at the Polo Grounds—36,529—the lean southpaw screwballer hurled the Giants to a 4-to-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Begun last July 17, his 20-win run equals that of a Giant great of another era, Rube Marquard, who turned the trick with one victory in 1911 and 19 in 1912. Hubbell had 16 straight last year, and achieved his fourth of 1937 today.

Frank Demaree belted a four-bagger in the ninth to save the Cubs from a shutout. But Hubbell was the master throughout.

Dizzy Dean kept right on top as the best pitcher of the season by winning his fifth straight victory, a 7-to-1 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Before nearly 30,000 fans who packed Ebbetts field, Dizzy the Great handcuffed the Brooklyns with nine hits, fanned seven, and, in allowing but one earned run, kept his season average at .400, far and away the outstanding record in the big leagues.

But for a bit of tough luck in the ninth frame, Dizzy would have pitched his third shutout of the year. Johnny Hudson lined a long smash to right, which should have been an out for Pepper Martin, but he fell while running after it and it rolled to the fence for a two-bagger. Pinch-Hitter Eddie Morgan followed immediately with another double for the Dodgers' only run.

Dizzy has now pitched 46 innings this year, with a record showing these figures:

3 runs (one unearned).
38 hits.
40 strikeouts.
5 bases on balls.
5 bases on balls.

Led by Ernie Lombardi and Alex Kampouris, the Reds pounded four pitchers for 24 hits and a 21-to-10 triumph over the Phillies today before 7,000 at Philly. Lombardi made six hits in six times at bat, all singles, and Alex Kampouris collected three home runs and a single, driving in eight runs.

Ed Brandt, Pittsburgh Pirate southpaw ace, kept eight Boston Bees' hits scattered except in one inning as his league-leading mates pounced on three Bee hurlers for seven hits and a 6-to-3 victory.

STEELE TO RISK TITLE TUESDAY

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP)—Freddie Steele makes his second 1937 defense of his middleweight title against Frankie Battaglia, of Winnipeg, in the leading bout of this week's national boxing program.

The 160-pound titleholder and Battaglia meet in a 15-round encounter at Seattle Tuesday night.

John Henry Lewis, the light-heavyweight king, collides with Patsy Perroni, of Cleveland, in a 10-rounder in Madison Square Garden here Friday night, while Sixto Escobar, the bantamweight champ, engages Mickey Jerome, New York, in another 10 at the New York Hippodrome Wednesday night. Mike Belloise, recognized in New York state as ruler of the featherweights, is booked in a 10-round affair with Johnny Cabello, of Puerto Rico, here tomorrow night.

Warren Is Winner Over Lanett, 3 to 2

Red Wood's home run in the eighth inning and Edison's five-hit pitching gave Warren a 3-to-2 victory over Joe Palmisano's Lanett Bleacher nine Sunday afternoon on the Warren athletic field.

Wood's homer, a 348-foot drive over the fence, sent Bobby Stith home ahead of him. Stith was given a base on balls, just before Wood hit.

Eidson pitched his best game of the year and it was Warren's eighth victory against only two defeats. He gave up five hits but was a bit wild, which aided the visitors to score their two runs.

George Lott Offers To Sock Fred Perry

HARTFORD, Conn., May 9.—(UP)—George Lott, former tennis star, tried to punch Fred Perry's nose today, but the former world's singles champion escaped when another of a group of touring professionals grabbed Lott's arm.

Standing under the umpire's stand on the Hartford Golf Club courts during a doubles match, Lott snarled at Perry. "One of these days I'll punch you in the nose—and I guess I'll do it today."

The slender, dark-haired Englishman put up his arms as George cocked his fist. When Bruce Barnes prevented the blow, Perry sidled away. The angered Lott was prevailed upon to continue the match, but he and Barnes lost to Ellsworth Vines and Perry, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1.

Leaves for Davis Cup Trials

Bitsy Grant was snapped by Constitution photographer, George Cornett, yesterday as Grant boarded a train at Brookwood station for Forest Hills, N. Y., where he will bid for the No. 2 singles position on the United States Davis cup team. Bitsy's chief rival is Frankie Parker. Grant is given a fighting chance to make the team.

'I'm Ready for Parker,' Declares Bitsy Grant

Atlantan, Off for Forest Hills, Knows What He Has To Do To Gain Place.

By JACK TROY.

With the issue apparent before he reaches the scene, Bitsy Grant departed yesterday to contest with Frankie Parker for the second singles position on the United States Davis cup team in the trials which begin Monday at Forest Hills, New York.

"It appears that the issue is clear-cut," Grant said before he boarded a Pullman at the Brookwood station yesterday afternoon. "It's to be a contest between Frankie Parker and me.

"Well, all I can say to that is that I'm ready. I'm sure that I'm no longer in a slump and if Parker, who is a fine player, beats me out, there will be no alibi."

This fighting chance is more than Grant has had before. It's very encouraging. Last year, for instance, Grant, playing fine tennis, seemed to have the inside track and at the last minute the aging Wilmer Allison was substituted for him. Whereupon, the Americans took a first-class beating from the Australians.

The zone match with Australia is less than three weeks distant. And Grant thinks the American team's lineup will be determined at least a week in advance of the matches.

WOULD RETURN HOME.

"I'll come back to Atlanta if I don't make the team," he said. "I have a fighting chance to land the singles position, however, and I intend to make the best of it."

Grant said he was highly impressed with the improvement of Russell Bobbitt's game. He played his final practice match with Bobbitt Saturday afternoon at the Atlanta tennis club.

"I daresay Bobbitt would be ranked in the first 20 nationally if he would go east for the experience he needs.

"That's all he lacks, in my opinion. Russell has an awfully fine net game. And he has shown a decided improvement in his service.

"I'd like to see him go east for the tournaments on grass and get that experience. I think he's the finest prospect Atlanta has had in many years," Grant added.

MAY TAKE ADVICE.

Bobbitt is a student at Tech and may take Grant's advice at the end of the school term.

Getting back to Grant and the Davis cup team, Cap Pate, this year's captain, is known to be most friendly to the Atlanta Atom. Pate, as a member of the committee last year, broke the last-minute news to Grant that Allison would play in his stead.

Pate, so the story went, had a choke in his voice when he told Grant he wouldn't play. And Bitsy responded, with an arm around Pate's shoulder, "That's all right, Cap, I think the committee did the right thing. I'll be out there pulling for us to win."

It is reasonable to surmise that Pate would like to see Grant get a break. And if his game warrants it, Grant probably will attain his chief goal of a place on the team.

BUDGE HAS POST.

Donald Budge, No. 1 player, will be awaredd the first singles position and Budge and Gene Mako will play doubles, according to plans. The other singles job will rest between Grant and Parker.

As said, it's more opportunity than Grant has had before. That is, a recognized fighting chance. He's no longer in the dark. Pate has said the one showing the better form in the trials will get the place.

So it may be Grant's and the United States Davis cup team's year. Grant can cover more court than Parker and when his game is at a peak, the Tiny Bulldog of the Baselines is steadier.

An improvised forehand is one of Grant's newest assets. He hits the ball harder. It takes that on grass.

Atlanta fans will be watching the results at Forest Hills with something amounting to a consuming interest.

CHANDLER LOSES FIVE-HIT BATTLE TO WHITE SOX, 2-1

Athletics Beat Tigers, 9-8, to Tie Indians for First Place.

CHICAGO, May 9.—(AP)—Zeke Bonura's home run in the seventh and Lefty Thornton Lee's four-hit pitching gave Chicago White Sox a 2-to-1 victory over the World Champion New York Yankees today in the first game of the series. It was New York's fourth straight defeat. Spurgeon Chandler, Yank recruit from Newark, held the White Sox to five hits.

Held scoreless for six innings, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated Detroit, 9 to 8, after a six-run rally in the seventh. Gerald Walker, Tigers' slugger, smashed out a home run with one on in the ninth. He did not get a hit before that. The A's, by their victory, went into a tie with Cleveland for first place.

Behind the four-hit pitching of the veteran Willis Hudlin, Cleveland's Indians won their fourth straight game, defeating the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 1. It was Hudlin's first start of the season.

AUBURN TIGERS TAKE BASEBALL TITLE IN S. E. C.

Alabama, Winner Past Two Years, Finishes in Second Position.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Auburn held the southeastern conference baseball championship again today, thanks to Mississippi State's help. Auburn, campaigning against only non-conference opposition, bounced into the lead when Mississippi State halted Alabama temporarily.

Both Auburn and Alabama have finished their conference schedules but no foes can displace them from first and second place, respectively, in closing games this week. Alabama won the crown the past two years.

Auburn's Plainsmen lost in the circuit only to Georgia Tech while winning four from Georgia and two each from Florida and Georgia Tech. Alabama's Crimson Tide dropped one each to Mississippi and Mississippi State while capturing four from L. S. U., and two apiece from Mississippi, Georgia Tech and Mississippi State.

Alabama's 1935-1936 champions were dethroned last week by dropping a 6-2 decision to Mississippi State before coming back to defeat the Maroons twice, 9-7 and 11-3. They were the first conference set back for Mississippi State, the last member to leave undefeated circles. The Maroons, in third place, play Mississippi State twice this week.

The conference standings, excluding three members which do not play baseball:

TEAMS—	Won	Lost	Pct.
Auburn	8	1	.888
Alabama	10	2	.333
Miss. State	7	2	.777
Florida	3	3	.500
Vanderbilt	1	1	.500
Mississippi	3	5	.375
L. S. U.	3	10	.231
Georgia Tech	2	7	.222
Georgia	1	5	.166
Tulane	0	2	.000

Feller Departs For Final Exams

CLEVELAND, May 9.—(UP)—Robert William Feller tonight tossed into a battered satchel two baseball gloves, a ball, a Cleveland Indians' uniform, and four high school textbooks and announced he was all set to tie into the final exams at the Van Meter, Iowa, High school.

The pride of the Van Meter school is a senior and is to be graduated this week—if he passes those examinations.

Sunday, May 16, Feller will rejoin the Indians in Chicago, where folks from around Van Meter will honor their hero on "Bob Feller Day." They're planning to run special trains out of Iowa, and they'll be loaded if the Indians' management will make one promise—that Feller will pitch against the White Sox.

BOWLING MEETING.

There will be a meeting of the Atlanta Duckpin Association at the office of the downtown bowling alleys, 20 Houston street, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

TARZAN'S QUEST No. 121

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Ogdli led the two girls through the courtyard, where fierce leopards prowled, ready to strike down those captives who were bold enough to attempt escape. They came finally to the ominous portals of the temple, beyond whose walls—Kavandavanda waited!

Kavandavanda! Who, or what, was he? To what mysterious fate was he summoning them? Such were the questions constantly recurring in the thoughts of the helpless girls. Jane believed that soon they would know the answers, and she anticipated only the worst.

She was denied the one hope that had given her strength to carry on through many dangerous situations in the past—Tarzan. Jane felt that her beloved mate must be wholly ignorant of her whereabouts. If he knew, he was not likely to reach her in time. . . .

. . . Tarzan did know where she was, but he, too, had little hope of arriving in time to save her. Nevertheless, he pushed on swiftly, stirring Brown and Tibbs to their utmost exertion—while a hostile fate was busily preparing barriers to wreck his mission.

Brandeis Deliberately Cast Away Lucrative Law Practice To Devote His Time to Many 'Causes' in Public Welfare

"The Nine Old Men"

By DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT ALLEN.

CHAPTER XVI.
The Crusader.

Between Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis and the other enlightened jurists who have made supreme court history exists a fundamental distinction.

The latter primarily have been philosophers, enunciating stirring canons of liberty and justice. Beyond that they have not gone. Having laid down their lofty precepts, they entered no camp; kept aloof from the din and clash of the fray.

Not so Brandeis. He has not been content to remain on the sidelines.

To him the passive role of proclaiming doctrine is not enough. First and foremost he has been a crusader.

This is the historic role which Brandeis fills in the life of the nation. It was as a crusader that he came to the supreme court over the desperate opposition of entrenched wealth, and it is as a crusader that for 20 years he has carved his epochal place as a jurist.

Brandeis frequently has been denounced by apostles of vested interests as a revolutionary who wished to destroy capitalism. And he has been just as bitterly denounced by radicals as a protector of capitalism. The truth is that he is neither. He is a crusader chiefly for human rights. His economic philosophy is rooted deep in American history. Thomas Jefferson was its founding father; Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, the elder Robert M. La Follette and Senator George Norris its greatest political exponents.

The essence of his theory is economic democracy, a social order in which the great mass of men, the little men, are assured of economic security and a share of the wealth they produce. Brandeis does not believe in collectivism. He is friendly but not an ardent champion of unionized labor or of Soviet Russia. He is as uncompromisingly opposed to this type of economic control as he is to that by capital. He fears the concentration of power in any form—whether in the hands of a president, an international banker or the NRA.

"Look at ancient Athens," he says. "It was no bigger than a county in Texas. Yet how important to the world."

The key to this famous antipathy to bigness is his hostility to any infringement of personal or economic liberty. Giant economic units, whether capitalist or collectivist, he holds, are menaces to individual security. The happiness and well-being of great masses of men become dependent on the will and self-interest of one individual or of one small class. If a large corporation shuts down operations, the economic structure of thousands is instantly destroyed; whereas, if these workers were employed in small shops, the suspension of a plant would affect only a few, and these could be quickly absorbed. Thus Brandeis reasons.

Also he reasons that there are not enough exceptional men in the world to direct wisely and efficiently any great concentration of corporate or social power.

"How can you know all of the things which take place in your vast organization?" he once asked the head of a great store system.

Brandeis is a great lover of mankind, yet at heart he is profoundly skeptical rearding man as an individual.

He distrusts man's ability to cope with the intricate economic complexities of the age, with the stupendous concentration of power put into his hands by modern machinery.

"Size brings monopoly instead of competition," says Brandeis. "Size submerges the talents of millions of people, and the wealth of the nation is gauged by the capacities of great numbers and not by the few. There is only a little difference between the capacity of the big men who dominate these empires and the rest of us lowly folk"—and he points to himself.

This is the explanation of why he struck down the NRA, yet at the same time has blasted his reactionary colleagues for denying to states and the federal government the right to experiment with social and economic regulation. To Brandeis, the dictatorship of the Blue Eagle was as sinister as the obstructionism of his Tory colleagues.

Brandeis has watched the development of the New Deal with intense interest and sympathy, though sometimes strong disapproval. And more than any other justice he has dropped a quiet and occasional hint to the official involved when a certain policy seemed to be heading toward disaster. General Johnson once came to see the justice, quite by surprise, during the early days of the Blue Eagle. Brandeis never had met him, and did not know he was coming, but in his mild-mannered way he warned the NRA administrator that the tremendous concentration of power in the hands of one agency and the code demination by larger and better organized firms were bound to cause him trouble. No clearer warning could have been given that when the National Industrial Recovery act came before the supreme court, whether in the Schecter case or any other, it would be vetoed, at least as far as one justice was concerned.

Brandeis went even further with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in regard to his crop-curtailment program, calling in Gardner Jackson, one of Wallace's former assistants, to say that he was much worried over the fact that the program was causing the United States to lose its world cotton markets. If cotton continued at such high prices, he predicted, Russia and Brazil would soon edge American cotton completely out of the market, leaving the south bankrupt. And he was especially concerned with the plight of the southern tenant farmer or sharecropper, forced to move from his pitifully small farm because of the reduction of cotton acreage. Brandeis specifically asked that this message be taken to Henry Wallace and to Chester Davis, the latter then administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He also urged Jackson to organize the small southern sharecroppers into some form of co-operative or union capable of demanding better economic treatment.

Thus, on an off the bench, Brandeis carries on his crusade. No other member of the supreme court has sent forth so many of his young friends and disciples to play important roles in the Roosevelt and other administrations. He taught them his philosophy, his spirit of crusade, and has watched them as they went out to carry his banner. Sometimes he has watched them with approval, sometimes he has not. James M. Landis, his one-time secretary, he has watched in the important post of chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, an able regulator of the bears and the bulls of Wall Street. Dean Acheson, another secretary, he has watched first as under secretary of the treasury, later as a utilities attorney in testing out the constitutionality of New Deal laws before the supreme court. And Louis R. Glavis, whom he once defended in the Pinchot-Ballinger fight, he has watched as head of the greatest secret-service agency in the government.

Brandeis had acted as counsel for Glavis in 1910 when, as investigator for the Interior Department, he was dismissed for exposing an Indian land-grab scandal which reflected upon his chief, Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior. Brandeis' annihilating cross-examination caused the resignation of Ballinger and exposed the fact that Taft had lied deliberately to shield his cabinet officer.

Twenty-three years later, Brandeis saw the man he had defended reinstated in the Interior Department as chief of the Bureau of Investigation, watched him assemble a force of a thousand supersleuths in an imitation of the Soviet OGPU, and heard reports of the greatest activity in wire-tapping, shadowing and infringement upon the personal privacy of American citizens since the World War. It was the activity of "Glavis' men" in the Texas oil fields which helped to prejudice Brandeis against the attempt of the Roosevelt administration to regulate the production of oil—a theory of regulation which coincided with Brandeis' own ideas of economic control except on one point: it favored the big oil operators. On top of this, Glavis created a corps of secret police to aid those big operators. So Brandeis cast his vote against the regulation of this vital national resource, even joining with his conservative colleagues in trumping up the excuse of unconstitutional delegation of power in order to do so.

Afterward he dropped a quiet hint regarding the OGPU activities of his former disciple, in a place where he knew it would do the most good.

"All this tapping of telephone wires," he said in his usual mild way, to Harry Slattery, personal assistant to Secretary of Interior Ickes, "all this—I hate to use a nasty word for it—but all this espionage. We had it during the war. But in ordinary times, it's not compatible with our American system."

Glavis' espionage activities were curtailed, and shortly thereafter he was dropped.

The crusader on the supreme court was keeping a watchful eye on the men and movements he has molded.

Louis Dembitz Brandeis was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1856, of parents from whom he inherited his devotion to democracy and his crusading fervor. His father and mother were German Jews who had fled to the United States after the failure of the German revolution in 1848. His maternal grandfather had led a revolution in Poland as early as 1830. His uncle, Louis Dembitz, was a delegate to the Republican convention in 1860, where he helped to nominate Lincoln, while Brandeis' father was an outspoken Union supporter, despite his residence in a southern community. The justice can still remember how, as a child, he accompanied his mother while carrying food and medicine to northern soldiers under the cover of darkness.

Brandeis' father was a grain merchant who made a substantial income but never permitted the subject of money to be discussed in his home. His two boys, Alfred and Louis, had all the advantages of the material things in life, coupled with a commonsense upbringing which avoided the usual disadvantages. Louis' youth was that of any normal youngster, and except for a little excess of belligerency, which might have been equally evident in an embryo gangster, there was nothing in those early years to indicate the crusading career in store for the son of the Louisville grian dealer.

Perhaps because he was four years younger than his brother, Alfred, and also because of his natural precociousness, Louis usually was put forward by his playmates as their juvenile trigger man. Whenever a newcomer appeared in the neighborhood, especially if he was what they called a "Lord Fauntleroy"—chief qualification for which was wearing shoes in the summer—Louis was egged on to do battle. Thus began his attacks upon plutocracy.

There was one fight in which he participated, however, in which he needed no goading. Cause of the altercation was a fair-haired and pigtailed young lady who loomed large in the life of the youthful jurist, but now—O Fate—is remembered by him only as Emma. At a dance one night, another boy, Julius Von Borries, also imbued with the conviction that Emma was essential to his future happiness, asserted that conviction, and next day he and Brandeis fought it out for the hand of the lady. History does not record who won the fight, but in later and much more mature years Brandeis married Alice Goldmark, of New York, whose parents, like his, fled Germany in 1848, and who has been to the justice as understanding and devoted a wife as Emma was glamorous in those romantic, turbulent days just after the Civil War.

Miss Alice Grady, secretary to Brandeis for 22 years before he was elevated to the supreme court, tells many stories of his boyhood, all bearing out the fact that he was anything but the aesthetic, sensitive person he is today. On one Fourth of July, while the Civil War was still raging, Louis and his brother were celebrating the independence of their country by dampening small quantities of black powder, then setting fire to it with a match. Suddenly a spark touched off the entire powder flask, frightfully burning the boys' faces. They washed the powder off in order to conceal the accident from their mother, but soon their faces had swollen pitifully. It was several weeks before they fully recovered.

On another occasion the Brandeis boys were engaged in the pastime of propping a straw man in a doorway, then ringing the bell. But this time, the precipitate toppling forward of the straw man caused the maid to faint, and the owner of the house came to the door with a shotgun. Fortunately, the Brandeis boys were well hidden.

Underneath this youthful impishness there must have been much of the kindly sympathy which has been one of the Brandeis' chief qualities in later life. It gleamed forth even then as Lizzie, the old family cook, testified:

"Mr. Louis was the thoughtfules' boy in this world. I remember very well when I went to Mattapoisett. I didn't know how white folks went in bathin'. I got a bathin' suit, but there wa'n't nothing to it below the knees. I jus' thought I couldn't do it.

"So I walked down on the beach to watch the others swim, and there was Mr. Louis lying flat on his back in the sand. I said: 'Why ain't you in bathin', honey?' And he said, 'I'm waiting for you, Lizzie.'

"'Go on,' I said, 'I ain't goin' in. I'm afraid of the salt water.'

"'That's all right, Lizzie,' he said, 'I wont' let it hurt you. And I ain't goin' in one step until you come along.'

"So rather than have him lose the nice swim, I jes' had to go and put on that bathin' suit and he led me in just like I was a fine lady."

The Brandeises were a wealthy, aristocratic family, some of them marrying gentiles, the St. Louis Taussigs. Young Brandeis saw little of his people. He studied at the University of Louisville, at Dresden, Germany, and took his law degree at Harvard in 1877. He was then 21, a brilliant, well-educated youth, but one who enjoyed the lighter things of life as much as the deeper, and who got bored, after one year of law practice, in the provincial city of St. Louis and returned to Boston and the more enjoyable haunts of his law-school days. At Boston he mingled with his old friends among the bluebloods of Back Bay and found himself building up a corporation law practice not greatly dissimilar to that of Hughes or Butler or Roberts in their youth. The only philosophy which appeared to motivate his practice in those very early days was how best to steer his clients toward their chief goal. that of increasing dividends.

To that end he served as counsel and director of the United Shoe Machinery Company, beginning in 1899, and drew up for it a leasing system which later he repudiated and which was the subject of bitter attack at the time of his senate confirmation. The leases contained a "tying in" clause whereby the shoe factory that rented one type of machine from the United Shoe Machinery Company also had to take all of its machines. The machines continued to be the property of United and could be recalled at any time on only 30 days' notice, meaning possible bankruptcy to the renting manufacturers. Brandeis not only helped organize the company but defended the system as legal, appearing before a committee of the Massachusetts state legislature, where he said that it had the advantage of renting machinery to the small manufacturer at exactly the same price as to the big, whereas the big manufacturer had the advantage of discounts in purchasing larger quantities of leather and raw materials. He also defended the leases as legal monopolies similar to patents.

SERVICES ARE HELD FOR TRAIN VICTIM

William Melvin Clay, 10, Laid to Rest in Hollywood Cemetery.

Funeral services for William Melvin Clay, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Clay, who was killed Saturday morning when struck by a train when he was returning home with flowers for his mother for Mother's Day, were held yesterday at the Holly Springs Methodist church with the Rev. Rush officiating.

Burial was in Hollywood cemetery under the direction of Brandon-Bond-Condon.

William was struck by a freight train in Inman Yards when he bent over to gather up flowers that had spilled from his arms.

Yesterday the flowers stood in a vase in his mother's room, just as William requested before he left on his ill-fated journey. A friend gathered them from the track and brought them to the Clay home.

MINISTERS HIT REPEAL.

COLUMBUS, Ga. May 9.—(AP)—The Ministerial Alliance of Columbus and Phenix City, Ala., has adopted a resolution opposing the legalization of the sale of liquor in Georgia and requesting "officers in the city and county and all judges to guarantee an election that shall fairly register the convictions of a majority of our people."

"Nine Honest Men"

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Chapter XVI.

The administration is veering somewhat in that direction today but it could have saved much time and effort and economic loss had it accepted the doctrine of evolution rather than revolution and had it built in 1933 on the experience of the past. Lest the reader say this is hindsight rather than foresight, he is referred to several newspaper dispatches from Washington on this point written when the NRA was first foisted on the American people.

Trade association groups should have the right to present their trade practice agreements or codes to the Federal Trade Commission for approval. That tribunal should be authorized by congress to hold public hearings at which any interested party affected by such codes may argue against or for their adoption so that the public interest may be at all times conserved. Obviously, the Federal Trade Commission should be authorized to suspend or limit or apply the anti-trust laws in the public interest and the courts should have complete power to review the decisions of the Federal Trade Commission.

But it is essential that the commission be of high-grade men and not politically influenced. It is important that a body of rules of fair competition be developed covering only those practices which a very substantial proportion of persons in a given industry and the public generally would now acknowledge to be unfair or fradulent.

All business methods cannot be reformed overnight but we have in the federal and state ample means of eliminating ruinous competition, unfair competition and fraud without attempting to give a governmental body power to fix prices or otherwise violate the laws of sound economics tested by centuries of human experience.

Transformation of many of the groups operating heretofore under codes into trade associations of a voluntary character, which would be granted certain exemptions by the federal government in return for the maintenance of certain standards, is entirely within the constitutional right of the federal government and the trade organizations.

The impression that the federal government is without power to exercise a far-reaching influence on national commerce or that industries and businesses which have been aided by codes are now powerless is not borne out by the words of the supreme court in various decisions under the very clause which was the subject of recent judgment by the court in the Schechter case.

In an opinion, 8 to 1, rendered on March 13, 1933, in the Appalachian Coal case, the supreme court went farther in defining what could be done by voluntary action toward stabilizing market conditions than in any previous case. In the light of the problem created by the necessary dissolution of the old NRA, the following words of the supreme court take on new significance because they seem to apply to some of the situations now arising:

"A co-operative enterprise, otherwise free from objection, which carries with it no monopolistic menace, is not to be condemned as an undue restraint merely because it may effect a change in market conditions, where the change would be in mitigation of recognized evils and would not impair, but rather foster, fair competitive opportunities.

"Voluntary action to rescue and preserve these opportunities, and thus aid in relieving a depressed industry and in reviving commerce by placing competition upon a sounder basis, may be more efficacious than an attempt to provide remedies through legal processes.

"The fact that the correction of abuses may tend to stabilize a business, or to produce fairer price levels, does not mean that the abuses should go uncorrected or that co-operative endeavor to correct them necessarily constitutes an unreasonable restraint of trade. The intelligent conduct of commerce through the acquisiton of full information of all relevant facts may properly be sought by the co-operation of all those engaged in trade, although stabilization of trade and more reasonable prices may be the result.

"Putting an end to injurious practices, and the consequent improvement of the competitive position of a group of producers is not a less worthy aim and may be entirely consonant with the public interest where the group must still meet effective competition in a fair market and neither seeks nor is able to effect a domination of prices."

What the foregoing probably would permit, for example, is a concerted effort by producers to eliminate price-cutting below cost or the use of the loss-leader in retail trade. It could mean elimination by agreement of certain things that might be classed, as the court phrases it, as "recognized evils" and yet not interfere with competition.

Ah China! of Thee Cain Writes, Singing Thy Praises in Lyric Form

From the Vast Wastes of Manchuria, Globe Girdler's Trek Leads Along Grand Canal and Beauty of Countryside Inspires the Bard in Wanderer.

By ARTHUR CAIN.

Leaving Peiping, following China's Grand Canal all the way to Shanghai, we had the most fascinating part of the whole trip. Here, on the famous Road to Mandalay we at last realized that we were actually in China, in the very heart of the orient in fact, and far from any point where an American or an English settlement existed. The Cain funds were practically nil again and prospects for more mealless days looked very good indeed. But we were so enraptured with the surroundings we couldn't worry about it in the least.

Arthur Cain.

The vast wastes of Manchuria were slowly turning into the most beautiful country I have ever seen. Where the arid stretches of the eastern tip of the Gobi desert formerly burnt the Cain eye, soft hills and dales were a welcome relief. We were glad to have passed through the section of China which has the most severe climate in the world. Unbearably cold in winter, burning hot in summer, Manchuria is the last place in the world to travel, even with money and all the comforts and luxuries of an expensive safari. Cain was extremely fortunate to get through as easily as he did.

Where Poetry Flowed.

Now the mild spring air let me know that I was getting into the part of China where romance and adventure abounded and where poetry flowed, even from Cain, at the slightest provocation. For once we were glad to be traveling on foot. We purposely dawdled along the trail, taking as long as we wished at each little spot which was our shelter for the night. This was the land of Kipling, indeed. We had no wish to hurry through this remote corner of the world.

It was another 1,000 miles from Peiping to Shanghai. Again would Cain have to depend upon the well-worn feet for the most part of the journey. We hoped that this jaunt would be a little less exciting than was that laborious trek from Vladivostok to Tientsin. The fewer wrestlers we saw the better and we could do completely without the hospitality of the outlanders who obviously considered it to be in the best Emily Post manner to tear the guest's clothes off and twirk their moustaches in the bargain. If we could just average our 40 miles per day, eat at least once a day and keep our cigarets dry we would be content with life.

Cain Sings of Love.

Why so few words have been written describing the beauty of this region is a mystery to me. We have always heard of the mystery and glamour of Suez and of the engineering achievement of Panama but until we actually visited the Grand Canal, the greatest waterway in the Far East, we knew nothing about it. Surely the most beautiful part of middle China, it has been ignored by poet and adventurer alike. Cain floated along with his head in the clouds and sang love ballads lustily.

Then one day we decided that something must be done about it. If there was no poetry in our libraries about the Chinese canal we would put some there. Cain sat himself down and wooed the elusive muse.

Cain Writes Ballad.

"Beautiful hills of the High North Country! Golden streams of lilting green! Air, sharp and fresh by day; by morn with gossamer clouds of mist; by noon the pristine glory of sun; night with its billowing blue—so soft, so rich, so calm. . . .

"The day doth dawn with such cold virgin grey to blossom so sweetly as to startle the birds and wood and dew with her saintly view. First, the stars will shimmer shy and begin to draw their veil of eerie mist upon themselves and recede into the greater veil, shyly, sadly, backing out, as if in reverence to the king.

"Then comes a spell so quiet and strange that the world doth wait with bated breath in fear that God is dead. 'Tis like the pause e'er the child is born; a fathomless void in the sea of death; waiting, waiting to feel the pulse of life again. Faintly, from the soul of God, will come the low sweet notes the angels sing, so faint and sweet the heart must strain to feel the coming of the new-born king. Faintly, through the ghostlike shrouds, the tints of lightest hue are seen. And then once more, as will be done 'til God is done, the world doth know 'tis day again.

Lutes and Trumpets.

"And with the fading of the violin, lute and song, the sound of trumpets may be heard. From dimmest east, 'neath the hills of Knue, the symphony makes its climb. Now the celestial spark of life has flamed the trumpets may be heard. Up and up, through the Glen of Kareen, through the woodland wild, o'er the knolls and peaks of Ashtaban, the concert makes its way.

"Stronger still the music comes and banners may be seen. O'er the blue of Frienlilieur the guidirons may be seen. Flaming, swirling through the grey, the scarlet blends with blue, spreads the sky with crimson fire, each cloud is thrown ablaze. The Ranks o' Red race o'er the heav'n to herald the coming day.

"Then it's here, this day, 'tis here the world around. Some sigh and mourn the now dead dark and bow their heads in shame. The morn is sad and grey for some, the chill and gloom pervades their soul, the day begins, a trial and care of ugly ways of doing.

"Not so in this land of hill and dale, not so in this land of sound and color, not so with the Red Riders of Dawn marching on, not so! The morn and thee are one in the beautiful hills of the High North country. Thee and the morn are one."

But after reading it over I think I prefer Ogden Nash's immortal epic—"Candy's dandy but liquor's quicker."
